President's Gold Policy Ruled Legal By Cummings

Glass Challenges Report to Secret Session of Bank Committee.

Reserve Attitude Outlined by Black

Piloting of Revaluation Measure Dominant Issue in House.

By Franklyn Waltman jr.

Appearing in secret session before the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, Attorney General Homer S. Cummings pronounced the Administration gold revaluation bill "constitutional beyond all doubt," and supported this assertion by a concisely written opinion.

It appeared the Attorney General convinced most of the members of the committee, which Tuesday had asked for a written opinion, but not Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), Virginia, who subsequently termed the Cummings decision an "illegal opinion."

Although the odds appear to be overwhelmingly against him, Senator Glass intends to press his fight against the bill which would commandeer the gold holdings of the Federal Reserve system, limit revaluation of the dollar to a point between 50 and 60 per cent of its present gold value and establish a $2,000,000,000 fund for stabilizing the exchange value of the dollar.

Glass to Question Black.

"I am an insurrectionist, a tory—a tory just like George Washington was," exclaimed the impetuous Virginian, as he left the committee room, recalling that the man who is now battling the Administration's monetary policy a year ago was wanted by President Roosevelt as his Secretary of the Treasury.

Senator Glass indicated that he proposed to question at length Gov. Eugene Black, of the Federal Reserve Board, when the latter reappears before the Senate committee at 4 p. m. today. Gov. Black briefly outlined the attitude of the Reserve Board and the Reserve System to the revaluation bill after Attorney General Cummings was excused.

But the Federal Reserve chieftain did not complete his testimony. It was understood that he followed

2,000 Killed In India Quake

Reports Reaching Calcutta Estimate Injured at 10,000.

Calcutta, Jan. 17 (AP).—Estimates of 2,000 killed and 10,000 injured were made today as reports trickled in through crippled communication systems from parts of India shaken in earthquakes Monday.

In addition to the 300 estimated by the Bihar provincial government to be dead at Darhbanga, an airplane survey showed that Monghyr suffered heavily, its death toll reaching several hundred.

Heavy losses of life were reported at Muzaffarpur, where 300 were killed, in the Chapra district, where 100 lost their lives, and other places including Bankura, Bezwadas, and Patna.

Airplane reconnaissances showed that the Bazaar at Monghyr was a heap of ruins and that public buildings in Chapra were wrecked. The hospital at Motihari was condemned as unsafe.

The aerial survey showed extensive cracks in the ground in North Bihar province. Reports to the India office indicated no Europeans and comparatively few Indians were victims of the quakes and the resulting floods.

Tents and provisions were rushed to Jamalpur, the most important center on the East India railroad, where 133 buildings were destroyed.

Montana Officials Face Impeachment

House Sifts Evidence on Governor, Secretary.

Helena, Mont., Jan. 17 (AP).—Delving into a mass of evidence, the Montana House of Representatives today began the task of deciding whether impeachment charges shall be brought against Gov. Frank H. Cooney and Secretary of State Samuel W. Mitchell.

The motion to file impeachment articles was offered, a special committee of seven censured the two for activities as members of the State board of examiners and in their individual capacities as elective officers.

Under Montana law, the House determines whether impeachment proceedings are to be instituted and the Senate serves as the trial court.

Peery Sworn, Pledges Tax Revenue Gain

Virginia Governor Asks School Fund; Hits Income Levy.

By Doug Warrenfels.

Richmond, Jan. 17.—With a 13-gun salute thundering in the distance, George C. Peery of Tazewell, today was inaugurated as governor.

Flanked by the Stars and Stripes and the Virginia flag, the governor drew cheers from a crowd of 10,000 as he unfolded his legislative program in a deep, bass voice.

Turquoise skies and a brisk wind contributed to the success of the ceremonies on the south portico of the Capitol.

Urges Nine Revenue Sources.

The message was marked by an appeal for a reduction of about 40 per cent in automobile license fees and for sharp increases in school funds by the General Assembly. In order to finance the educational expansion program, the executive recommended nine new sources of revenue likely to yield $1,161,000 annually. He proposed drastic revision of State income tax laws.

The oath of office was administered by Chief Justice Preston W. Campbell, State Supreme Court of Appeals. Mrs. Peery sat nearby. At her side was Mrs. John Garland Pollard, wife of the retiring governor.

Notables included Fred W. McWane, Lynchburg, defeated Republican gubernatorial candidate; Representatives Howard W. Smith, T. H. Burch, A. Willis Robertson and Colgate W. Darden; former Gov. E. Lee Trinkle, and Mayor J. Fulmer Bright, of Richmond.

Lieut. Gov. James H. Price also was sworn in, but Attorney General John R. Saunders was prevented by illness from appearing to take the oath.

Envoy of South Africa Sailing for Washington

London, Jan. 17 (AP).—South Africa's new Minister to Washington, R. W. Close, and Mrs. Close, were passengers today on the boat train for Southampton, to embark on the Maurentania for the United States.

Passenger lists also included Princess Alice, the Countess of Athlone, and Queen Mary's brother, the Earl of Athlone, en route to the Bahamas.

Dr. Wynekoop Sinks as Net Is Tightened

Her Death Is Imminent as State Tells of Insurance Deals.

Chicago, Jan. 17 (AP).—Dr. Alice L. Wynekoop was reported in danger of death today as the State's star witnesses paraded to the stand and gave testimony against her.

Defense attorney W. W. Smith said the 62-year-old defendant's physicians had informed him that she "might die any minute" of heart disease.

Dr. Catherine Wynekoop, her daughter, said she was "very much afraid mother won't be able to go through the trial."

Details of how Dr. Alice applied for a $10,000 double indemnity life insurance policy on her daughter-in-law Rheta a month before the girl was slain, statements made by Dr. Wynekoop to police and the detailed testimony of Thomas J. Ahern, undertaker, came forth as the prosecution built its case.

Prosecutors indicated they believed some of their most important evidence was placed in the records by Miss Julia McCormick, life insurance saleswoman.

Tells of Insurance Deal.

She recalled being summoned to the Wynekoop home by telephone last October 23, told how Dr. Alice furnished the information needed to apply for the $10,000 policy, took it outside Miss McCormick's presence for Rheta's signature, and finally paid the first premium on the policy—reduced to $5,000 by the company because Rheta was under weight—on November 11, just 10 days before Rheta's tragic death.

Dr. Alice slouched in her chair at counsel's table. At times she closed

Insull Put to Bed With Weak Heart

Physician Says He Could Not Leave Greece.

Athens, Jan. 17 (AP).—Almost on the eve of the state council's hearing on his appeal against government orders to leave Greece, Samuel Insull took to his bed today on a doctor's orders, because of a weak heart.

The condition of the former utilities operator was described by his physician, Dr. Voilas, as such that he could not be moved even if the council's decision Friday is against him.

Dr. Voilas revealed the erstwhile financier, whose extradition to the United States to face embezzlement charges, was sought twice vainly, went to bed "at my orders because he is already suffering from a weak heart, which was greatly aggravated on account of recent shocks."

C. Mendieta Given Cuban Presidency

Batista, Former Sergeant in Control; Names 3 to Cabinet.

Havana in Siege; Strike Grows; 4 in Field for President.

Havana, Jan. 17 (AP).—Carlos Mendieta was offered the presidency of Cuba tonight and definitely accepted the post.

Havana, Jan. 17 (AP).—Col. Fulgencio Batista, former sergeant who rode one revolution to the leadership of the Cuban army, became the center of a new crisis tonight with a change in presidents expected within 24 hours.

As a fast-growing strike threatened to paralyze government activities and transportation, Col. Batista was reported to have named three army lieutenants to government posts, prepared to install others in like positions and proclaimed that malcontents would not be permitted to provoke anarchy and disorder.

Rumors, meanwhile, persisted that another governmental change was imminent, and that Batista's virtual seizure of power was a preface to it.

Hevia at Palace.

Carlos Hevia, 33-year-old graduate of the Annapolis Naval Academy, who was named provisional president only Monday, remained in the presidential palace while the militant Batista brought soldiers from Camp Columbia and installed them in police stations and government offices.

His swift action followed a day of uncertainty that reached a climax at noon when government telegraph and postal employes walked out and were joined by employes in the departments of state, public instruction, justice, public works, agriculture and interior.

The strike was sponsored by a "united front" comprising adherents of Dr. Antonio Guiteras, former minister of war and the interior, the powerful A B C Secret Society, the Student Directory, and the Federation of Labor.

Batista, whom they described as a military dictator, refused to leave his post, and countered with a defiant statement that "the Cuban government can not be Communistic or radical."

A change in the presidency within 24 hours was considered a foregone conclusion in high circles, who expressed the opinion that Hevia was "through."

Guiteras a Refugee.

It was learned on good authority that Dr. Guiteras, who was credited with having "maneuvered" Hevia into the presidency and who this morning was considered Batista's potent enemy, was a refugee tonight aboard a Cuban warship in Havana harbor.

It was reported that Batista's move was considered during a conference between him, two cabinet members, Salvador Menendez, the commander of the navy, and Sergio Carbo, a student leader, who had been an adherent of Hevia.

Batista and Menendez issued a joint manifesto, declaring the army and navy were united.

Prior to his move, the army chief of staff sent two battalions of infantry from Columbia to Havana. They took charge of government buildings, police headquarters, light and power plants and other vital points.

The police were issued long rifles. Detachments of soldiers occupied radio stations and censored broadcasts.

Lieut. Gumersindo Diaz was understood to have been named secretary of the interior; Lieut. Antonio Ramos, secretary of sanitation, and Lieut. Evelio Miranda, secretary of communications.

Two Major Factors.

Two matters, meanwhile, came up for speculation. The first concerned who would be the new president, and the second involved recognition by the United States.

It seemed certain to many that the next leader would be one of the following: Jose Antonio Presno.

3,240 Score Won On 13-Spade Hand

Bridge Player, Vulnerable, Makes 7 Redoubled.

Front Royal, Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.).—A perfect bridge hand, estimated by experts as dealt not oftener than once in a million hands, was held here last night by Maj. Monty Stone, of New York, a few hours after his $10,000 automobile was destroyed by fire.

The other players were C. O. Maddox, Stone's partner; Paul Rudacille and Edgar Updyke, all of here. Rudacille, dealer, bid one heart, Maddox passed, Updyke bid two hearts and Stone seven spades. Rudacille, with three aces, doubled; Maddox and Updyke passed, and Stone, vulnerable, redoubled and showed 13 spades, scoring 3,240.

Glover Files Burned, Air Probe Told

Airway Official Relates $35,000,000 Profit on $235 Deal.

Evidence that former Assistant Postmaster General Irving Glover ordered his office records burned just before he left office, developed as a by-product to significant revelations about the financial ramifications of the aviation industry at yesterday's Senate air mail committee hearing.

The committee had barely recovered from the shock of hearing that Glover had ordered his files burned, when they heard Frederick B. Renschler, United Air Transport official, tell about an original $235 investment which in two years had a market value of $35,500,000.

Renschler calmly listed salaries of nearly half a million dollars, large bonuses, and fat dividend payments, during the six years his line received $40,000,000 from the Government for air mail contracts as subsidies to a needy industry.

Glover to Testify.

As a result of testimony of his former employes in the Postoffice Department, Glover has been called to give his version of the destruction by fire, and will probably testify next week.

R. L. Johns, the small, rather scared, stenographer who served Glover as personal secretary during the 12 years he was in the Postoffice Department, was grilled for nearly two hours about the correspondence which he disposed of.

Claiming that the letters, which filled four mail sacks and which came from official postoffice folders, were "personal and confidential," Johns struggled to keep up with the rapid-fire questions.

At Glover's orders, he said, he filled the sacks with the discarded correspondence and then turned it over to a messenger for final disposal.

Robert E. Smith, colored messenger, supplemented the recital at this point by testifying that he carried the sacks downstairs in the Postoffice Building and burned them.

A large pile of empty folders, all indexed, which were passed back and forth between committee members and witnesses, served as satisfactory props for the performance.

Lines on Labels.

The folders were labeled with the names of various air mail routes and such suplementary groupings as: "Transcontinental Air Mail Service," "Radio, Air Mail Service" and "Rate Investigation."

Johns refused to swear that there had been no official correspondence among that destroyed, saying that if there had been any "it shouldn't have been, and was relatively unimportant."

Most of the letters, he said, related to philatelic matters, because Mrs. Glover was an ardent stamp collector and was particularly interested in first flight air mail stamps.

Taxed by Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama, chaiman of the committee, about the disposition of any of Glover's official correspondence, the witness said that it was all sent to Earl Wadsworth, superintendent of air mail, to be filed separately.

The evidence of Glover's destruction of his office files comes close

U. S. Pilot Breaks Light Plane Mark

Miles Betters Speed of French Airman.

Miami, Fla., Jan. 17 (AP).—Lee Miles, of Los Angeles, today captured from France the world's speed record for single-seater planes weighing less than 992.07 pounds.

Miles flew the 100-kilometer (62.137 miles) closed course at an average of 209.11 miles an hour, bettering by the slight margin of 1.80 miles an hour the record speed of 207.392 miles by the French pilot, Delmette, over the Etampes course on May 22, 1933.

The West Coast pilot, who designed and built the tiny four-cylinder motored monoplane in which he won the record, also established a United States mark in what previously was an unrecorded distance for this country, National Aeronautical Association officials said.

An Affair of Honor—No Less—Rocks House

Committee Chairmen Marshal Forces and Vast Arguments, and Enter Lists to Place Their Names on President's Gold Bill.

As the shades of night fell across Capitol Hill and the starlings took up their even-song, the score in the unique House comm' .ee battle for possession of the President's gold devaluation bill stood:

Chairman Somers, 1; Chairman Steagall, 1.

True, Chairman Andrews L. Somers (Democrat), New York, of the House Coinage, Weights and Measures Committee, flushed with the thrill of his first chairmanship, had physical possession of the document last night.

But Chairman Henry B. Steagall (Democrat), Alabama, had stolen a march on his young opponent by substituting the language of the President's bill into H. R. 5073, long known as the Goldsborough bill, and reporting that ancient measure to the House.

The tug-of-war for the Administration gold bill—or rather for the privilege of introducing it in the House—will go into overtime periods today, when Chairman Somers, after a brief executive session of the Coinage Committee, at which Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau will testify, will report in the original measure as received from the White House.

Each committee chairman will seek unanimous consent to have his bill taken up by the House, and as this will not be obtained, the decision probably will rest with the Rules Committee, where a merry battle is anticipated.

Majority Leader Joseph Byrns of Tennessee grinned and scratched his head last night, admitting it was "the most unusual situation" that ever came up in the House.

Speaker Rainey, whose ruling which sent the bill to Somers' com-

Billion More For U. S. Aid To Be Asked

Fund Will Support Relief Administrations Until Fiscal Year Ends.

Urged on the one hand to enlarge public works and on the other to keep within the huge anticipated deficit, President Roosevelt yesterday planned an early message asking Congress to authorize $1,166,000,000 to keep alive the emergency administrations until July 1.

In this he was believed pursuing a middle-ground course, between the demands of ardent Senate champions of the New Deal, who think the present public and civil works program should be strengthened, if anything, but certainly not relaxed, and the more conservative element fearful of the consequences.

He disclosed to newspapermen at his press conference that the emergency appropriation asked in his budget would probably be the next Administration legislation, since the original allotment to the Civil Works Administration will have been exhausted by February 10.

Tapering Off Seen.

This contemplates gradual tapering off both public and civil works, which later in the day brought strenuous objections from Senators Robert M. La Follette (Republican), Wisconsin; Edward P. Costigan (Democrat), Colorado, and Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), New York. Thus the President found himself opposed in easing off the present program by the very element that helped him initiate it last spring.

The $1,166,000,000 was proposed in the President's budget message as a lump sum which recovery agencies would need before the end of the fiscal year. There was no indication he intended to change it, despite renewed argument by consistent supporters, but prospects were certain the Senatorial Progressives would attempt to assure no let-up in this form of relief.

Didn't Talk Figures.

Asserting they did not get around to actual figures, the three Senators said they confined themselves in their talk with the President to the

D. C. Liquor Bill Passed By Senate

President's Signature by Tomorrow, Is Hope of Leaders.

Vice President Garner's gavel pounded a District liquor bill providing for a licensing system through the Senate yesterday, bringing debate to an abrupt halt at the end of two hours, just as it threatened to get fairly started.

The bill is to go to conference between the House and Senate today, and legislative action may be completed before the two houses adjourn. It is expected to go to the President for signature not later than tomorrow.

Vice President Garner brought debate on the bill to a sharp conclusion as soon as Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas, had proposed to substitute a Government dispensary system for the private licensing system written into the bill by the Commissioners, the House and the Senate District Committee.

The Capper proposal was defeated without a record vote. So were other amendments he proposed, and the bill was passed and the conferees appointed within five minutes after the first crack of the Vice President's gavel.

The Capper amendments were the only opportunity opponents of the licensing system had to get a vote. Senator Capper asked for a record vote on his dispensary substitute but only a scattering of Senators were on the floor and not enough supported his request. Almost before reading of one Capper amendment was completed the Vice President raced through the formal wording, declared them beaten and banged his gavel for the next.

"Cactus Jack" was giving the Senate a taste of how things were done when he presided as Speaker of the House. So fast did he move, in fact, that he had to recall his words which had sent the measure to the House before Senator Capper had a chance to finish offering his amendments.

"I don't think we got a fair chance on our dispensary proposals," Senator Capper said afterward. "But they had us beaten on a vote anyway and I don't intend to seek a reconsideration."

Senators Robert R. Reynolds, of North Carolina, and William H. King, of Utah (Democrat), and Capper were named conferees by the Vice President.

Many amendments recommended by the District Committee were adopted and the measure must go back to the House for their approval. It is to be reported when

Lost Half of Royal Diamond Detected in 1226-Carat Find

Pretoria, Union of South Africa, Jan. 17 (AP).—The lost half of the huge Cullinan diamond, for which a search has been in progress nearly 30 years, was believed today to have been found at last.

The discovery was made when a prospector at Elandsfontein unearthed two massive and beautiful gems in loose alluvial stone within 3 miles of where the Cullinan was found.

The finder refused $375,000 for the two stones, of 500 and 726 carats. The smaller was discribed as "good," and the larger as flawless.

King Edward VII was given the famous Cullinan gem in 1907 by the Transvaal government. The largest jewel cut from it is the "Star of Africa" and is in the British royal scepter, while the next largest is set in the British crown.

When the original Cullinan, weighing a pound and three-quarters, was found 29 years ago, it was noticed that one side of it was formed by a fracture, indicating that it was only a part of what must have been a stone probably double its size.

An answer to the question of what became of the missing half has been sought ever since. Diamond dealers felt that perhaps the Elandsfontein discovery may supply the answer.

Elandsfontein is 20 miles north of here.

Steve to Keep Right on Selling Goobers—President Says So!

The New Deal was extended yesterday to Steve Vasilakos, purveyor of peanuts to Presidents and their ladies, who thought himself one of the forgotten men.

President Roosevelt intervened to keep Steve and his peanut stand right where they have been for 29 years, at Pennsylvania and East Executive avenues.

Last week the Chamber of Commerce transportation committee decided Steve and his stand constituted an obstruction to traffic. They voted to recommend his removal by District Commissioners.

A newspaper clipping setting forth Steve's plight and his determination to use his influence with Senator McAdoo in a last-ditch fight to maintain his position, was brought to the attention of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

Mrs. Roosevelt sent the clipping to Stephen T. Early, White House secretary, with this memorandum:

"Must this man go?"

But Mr. Roosevelt already had contacted the head of the police traffic division, giving instructions that Steve was not to be molested.

Years ago some one threatened to oust Steve. President Wilson stepped in that time.

Steve is known by his first name to thousands of Washingtonians. The late President Coolidge was among his best customers. The present First Lady is said frequently to buy a bag of Steve's popcorn or peanuts.

Harvest Is Reaped By Committeemen

Party Treasurer Holds One Job; Secretary to Seek Clients.

By Raymond Clapper.

A shake-up in the Democratic party organization to divorce operation of the Government from political interference is under way.

This became known after President Roosevelt had turned a cold frown of displeasure on the practice of Democratic National Committeemen, who have been drawing large and easy fees for alleged influence with Government Departments.

The resignation of Frank C. Walker of New York, as treasurer of the Democratic National Committee was announced last night. This was to permit him to continue as executive director of the National Economic Council.

Jackson Also Quits.

Robert Jackson, of New Hampshire, also announced his resignation as secretary of the Democratic National Committee and as National committeeman for New Hampshire. This was to permit him to continue a richly-paying law practice which he has built up in Washington since the new Administration came in. Neither of his resignations has yet been accepted.

In both instances, it was stated, the resignations had been offered some time ago. They were announced, however, within a few hours after President Roosevelt, at a press conference yesterday, had said he did not think it in accordance with the spirit of the Administration for men holding high party office to use those places for earning a livelihood in a way that implied back-door influence.

Walker's Statement.

Mr. Frank C. Walker resigned as treasurer of the Democratic National committee in hte early part of November. The excessive pressure of official duties had prevented him for many months from taking an active part in the treasurer's office. At the time of his resignation, it appeared very likely that

14 on Sinking Yacht Rescued

South Seas Bound, Party Finds Adventure Day From Port.

Passaic, N. J., Jan. 17 (AP).—The sailing yacht Alamyth, 24 hours out of Passaic, adventure bound in Southern seas with 14 aboard, ran afoul of the weather 75 miles off Barnegat Light today and was abandoned in a sinking condition.

Wireless messages to the Coast Guard from the steamer Gulfland, which rescued the 10 men and 4 women during heavy seas, told the story of the near-tragic end of the party's search for romance and adventure.

Two hours before the rescue the master of the Gulfland reported to the Coast Guard that the Alamyth was sinking and in immediate need of assistance. The Coast Guard dispatched the cutter Thetis at full speed and estimated it would reach the scene at 7 p. m. Two other cutters, the Hermes and Cahoona, later were dispatched.

The Gulfland was forced to abandon its No. 3 lifeboat because of heavy seas.

Besides Capt. John Metsal and Cook Peter Peterson those saved included George A. Conklin, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kobbe, of Teaneck, honeymooners; Paul Clifford, of Teaneck; Ethelbert E. Furlong, Montclair landscape artist; Miss Medora Gehben, of New York; Charles Bradley, New York lawyer, and two Baltimore men, James E. Hewes and Horace Robbins. Most of the men were said to have had some experience in sailing craft.

New Gold Bill Declared Valid By Cummings

closely the points made in his statement Tuesday and his letter of December 29 to President Roosevelt, in which he contended that the system felt title to its gold should be transferred by Congressional act and that the system was not interested in the enhanced value of this gold which would result from dollar devaluation.

Senate Delays Foreseen.

Due to the intentions to question Gov. Black at length and a decision of the committee to call more witnesses, including representatives from several of the reserve banks, the possibility of getting the bill before the Senate before next week evaporated.

Earlier in the day a slight concession was made to Senator Glass when section 10 of the bill as introduced by Senator Duncan U. Fletcher (Democrat), Florida, was rewritten to limit the powers of the Secretary of the Treasury in the operation of the stabilization fund to the specific purposes of exchange stabilization. Another change in the bill would make annual audits of the fund mandatory but would keep them secret unless the President wished to reveal them.

Meanwhile, the House appeared to be still more interested in who should have the honor of piloting the gold bill through that body than in the merits of the measure. Representative Henry B. Steagall (Democrat), Alabama, chairman of the House Banking and Currency Committee, late in the day scored a victory, which is expected, however, to be short-lived.

House Given Hybrid Bill.

Abandoning his fight to have the Speaker overruled on his reference of the bill to the Coinage Committee, Mr. Steagall called his group together, had them take up the so-called Goldsborough stabilization bill, strike out everything after the enacting clause and insert the language of the Administration gold bill. He reported this hybrid measure to the House late in the day.

But before the bill can be considered it must have a rule from the Rules Committee, which is expected to uphold the Speaker by giving a rule to the bill reported by the Coinage Committee. The latter group will meet today to report the bill out after hearing Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morganthau, jr., explain its provisions.

Mr. Cummings was questioned regarding his opinion by several of the committee, but what transpired behind the closed doors was unknown. On leaving the room Mr. Cummings said that the bill was "constitutional beyond all doubt," adding its validity was as "clear as a bell." He said his opinion was challenged sharply "in one quarter." Although he refused to divulge names it was presumed he meant Senator Glass.

Right Upheld Since First.

Mr. Cummings said he wrote his opinion yesterday, not only in reply to a request from the committee, but also from the Secretary of the Treasury. Earlier in the day at the White House it was said he had given an oral opinion upholding the Government's right to seize the Federal Reserve gold last spring, when the first order calling in gold was issued.

The dispute of the constitutionality of the measure centered on section 2, which provides for commandeering the Federal Reserve gold. The contention was that gold certificates the Government proposed to give in exchange for this $3,600,000,000 of gold (on the basis of the present statutory price) was not "just compensation."

Mr. Cummings maintained that this gold could be taken by the Government in the "exercise of its right of eminent domain," pointing out the latter was "inseparable from sovereignty."

He contended that "the taking of gold for monetary purpose is for a public use" and that the power to coin and regulate the value of money was vested by the Constitution in Congress.

Certificates "Just Pay."

Mr. Cummings argued that the requirement for "just compensation is completely satisfied by the provision for payment in gold certificates in equivalent amounts of dollars." Congress had the power, he continued, to make "paper money legal tender for the payment of all debts, public or private" and the Government may discharge its obligations in such currency.

The amount of "just compensation," he asserted, must be determined "as of the time of taking, and not as of some subsequent date." The compensation to which the owner is entitled, he asserted, does not increase because at a later period the value of the property may be enhanced in value. Thus, he argued, "the value of the gold must be determined as of the moment that title passes to the United States."

The measure of compensation must be the prevailing price, he ruled, adding that in the case of gold, except for newly mined gold, the prevailing price in this country is the statutory figures of 25.08 grains, nine-tenths fine, to the dollar, or $0.67 an ounce, which is the price provided by the bill.

World Price Discarded.

"The conclusion seems inescapable," he added, "that this provision safeguards the owners in their right to receive as just compensation the value prevailing at the time of taking."

He discarded the contention that the world price, much above the statutory figure at home, would be the prevailing price, because it is illegal for an owner of gold in the United States to ship it abroad for sale. At this point he paused to sustain the constitutionality of the embargo on export of gold.

In conclusion Mr. Cummings contended that the member banks of the Reserve system did not have any right, title or interest in the gold held by the Reserve banks,

Cummings Rules Gold Policy Valid Under Eminent Domain

Mode of Exercisnig Pow Declared no Longer Open Question.

The text of Attorney General Homer S. Cummings' opinion upholding the constitutionality of the gold revaluation bill, read to the Senate Banking and Currency Committee yesterday was as follows:

The Honorable,
The Secretary of the Treasury.
My dear Mr. Secretary:

"I am pleased to comply with your request for an expression of my vienws as to the constitutionality of section 2 (a) of the proposed gold reserve bill.

provides that all right, title and intercst, and every claim of the Federal Reserve Board, ofevery Federal Reserve Bank, and every Federal Reserve agent, in and to any and all gold con and gold bullion shall pass to and are hereby vested in the United States. Payment is to made in gold certificates in equivalent amounts of dollars.

The monetary gold stock may be taken by the Government in the exercise of its right of eminent domain. Such power extends to every form of property required for public use.

Basic Government Right.

The Supreme Court observed in Kohl vs. United States, 91 U. S. 367, 371, that the right of eminent domain "is inseparable from sovereignty;" and in United States vs. Jones, 109 U. S. 513, 518, that it "belongs to every independent government."

The manner in which the power is exercised is within the control of the Legislature. This principle was formulated in Secombe vs. Railroad Co., 23 Wall. 108, 117, in the following language:

"It is no longer an open question in this country that the mode of exercising the right of eminent domain, in the absence of any provision in the organic law prescribing a contrary course, is within the discretion of the Legislature. There is no limitation upon the power of the Legislature in this respect, if the purpose be a public one, and just compensation be paid or tendered to the owner for the property taken."

Likewise the necessity for the exercise of the power is a matter solely for legislative determination. Monongahela Navigation Co. vs. United States, 148 U. S., 312, 327.

Public Use Unquestioned.

Unquestionably, the taking of gold for monetary purposes is for a public use. The establishment and the regulation of a monetary system is one of the fundamental functions of government. The power to coin money and regulate the value thereof is expressly reposed in Congress by article 1, section 8, clause 5, of the Constitution. Veazie Bank vs. Fenno, 8 Wall., 533, 549. In fact, monetary gold is a commodity affected with a public interest. Ling Su Fan vs. United States, 218 U. S., 32.

The requirement for just compensation is completely satisfied by the provision for payment in gold certificates in equivalent amounts of dollars. Since the decision in the Legal Tender Cases, 12 Wall. 457, it may no longer be successfully disputed that Congress may make paper money legal tender for the payment of all debts, public or private, and that the Government may discharge its obligations in currency of that type.

Value Fixed at Seizure.

The amount of just compensation is determined as of the time of taking, and not as of some subsequent date. The mere fact that at a later period the property may acquire an enhanced value, or that there may be an accretion to the thing taken, does not increase the compensation to which the owner is entitled. Thus, in this instance, the value of the gold must be determined as of the moment that title passes to the United States.

The mere fact that, if thereafter the weight of the gold dollar should be reduced, the value of the gold would become proportionately greater, does not serve to give the prior owner any right to secure increased reimbursement. Brooks Scanlon Corp. v. United States, 265, U. S. 106.

The measure of compensation must be the prevailing price. Vogelstein vs. United States, 262 U. S. 337. The prevailing price of gold goin and gold bullion in the United States (other than newly-mined gold) is fixed by statute. The act of March 14, 1900, (U. S. Code, Title 31, 314) prescribes that the weight of the gold dollar shall be 25.8 grains, nine-tenths fine, which in turn makes gold worth $20.67 an ounce..

Public Safeguard Cited.

That is the price that the owner of gold would have received at the mint, if he had presented it for deposit, prior to March 4, 1933. That is likewise the price that he would have received at any subsequent time if he surrendered it in accordance with the requirements of the executive orders or the orders of the Secretary of the Treasury issued under the act of March 9, 1933.

This, is also the price that it is proposed to pay for gold to be taken under Section 2 of the bill under consideration. The conclusion seems inescapable that this provision safeguards the owners in their right to receive as just compensation the value prevaling at the time of taking.

The fact that the market price of gold in foreign countries is greater than the statutory price in the United States, avails the owners nothing. An owner of gold in the United States has no way of shipping the gold abroad, in view of the prohibition against the export of gold from this country, promulgated under the act of March 9, 1933. Consequently, an owner of gold in the United States is in no position to secure the so-called "world price," and, therefore, his gold is not worth more than the statutory price.

Export Ban Valid.

The prohibition of the export of gold is constitutional. Thus, in Ling Su Fan vs. United States, 218 U. S. 302, the Supreme Court upheld the validity of an act placing an embargo on the export of silver coin from the Philippine Islands, in spite of the contention that the result was a taking of property, because of the fact that in China silver bullion had a higher market value than its nominal coinage value in the Philippines.

The question has been raised as to whether the member banks have any right, title, and interest in the gold coin or bullion held by the Federal Reserve Banks. In my opinion, this inquiry should be answered in the negative. The member banks have no claim against the assets of the Federal Reserve Banks except as stockholders, and, of course, it cannot be contended that in taking any of the assets of a corporation — any compensation should be paid directly to the stockholders thereof.

Every Federal Reserve Bank is now required to maintain a gold reserve against circulating notes and deposits (Federal reserve act, Section 16; U. S. Code, Title 12, Section 413). Any part of such reserve may be used as part of the collateral for Federal reserve notes, which is required to be deposited with Federal reserve agents.

Gold Source Immaterial.

The mere fact that the source of some or all of such gold may be deposits made by member banks with the Federal Reserve Banks, is immaterial. As soon as the gold is deposited with the Federal Reserve Bank, it loses its identity, and the relationship between the Federal Reserve Bank and the member bank becomes that of debtor and creditor.

The gold reserves of the Federal Reserve Banks must not be confused with the reserve balances which every member is required, by Section 10 of the Federal Reserve Act, to maintain with its Federal Reserve Bank. The reserve balances of the member banks need not be in gold.

In closing, I desire to call to your attention the following expressions of the Supreme Court in Ling Su Fan vs. United States, 218 U. S., 302, 310:

"Conceding the title of the owner of such coins, yet there is attached to such ownership those limitations which public policy may require by reason of their quality as a legal tender and as a medium of exchange. These limitations are due to the fact that public law gives to such coinage a value which does not attach as a mere consequence of intrinsic value. Their quality as a legal tendar is an attribute of law aside from their bullion value. They bear, therefore, the impress of sovereign power which fixes value and authorizes their use in exchange."

The foregoing considerations lead me to the conclusion that Section 2 (a) of the bill is constitutional.

Very truly yours,
HOMER CUMMINGS,
Attorney General.

Senate Passes D. C. Liquor License Bill

President's Signature by Tomorrow, Is Hope of Leaders.

the House meets at noon. Representative Mary T. Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, chairman of the House District Committee, will move that the House disagree to the Senate amendments and ask for a conference.

Speaker Henry T. Rainey will name Representatives Norton, Vincent L. Palmisano (Democrat), Maryland, and Gale H. Stalker (Republican), New York, as House conferees.

Senators King, Reynolds and Capper said they thought the conferees could reach an agreement in an hour or two and make an immediate report. Representative Norton said the same thing.

Immediately the measure becomes law the Commissioners will seek an appropriation for expenses of the alcoholic beverage control board of three members provided for in the bill. House and Senate leaders said the appropriation would be made quickly.

Appointment of the beverage control board has been promised by Commissioner George E. Allen by the end of this week. The bill requires two weeks' notice shall be given of each application for a license.

Just when liquor may be legally sold in the District will depend on how quickly regulations are drafted by the Commissioner and the other requirements are met.

Two Disagreements Seen.

Two Senate amendments are expected to meet with objections from the House conferees. The House bill fixed at 30 the minimum number of rooms which must be available for transients to permit issuance of a "hotel" license. The Senate increased the number to 50. House members feel this is an unjust discrimination against the small hotel.

As submitted by the Commissioners and passed by the House the bill provided that at least one of the three members of the alcoholic beverage board, to be appointed by the Commissioners, must be a woman. The Senate struck this out. Representative Norton wants the assurance reinserted. Its elimination, she fears, will mean a woman will not be named. An out and out wet, in favor of a liberal control provision, Mrs. Norton feels the mothers of the city should be represented by a member of their sex on the control board.

Another amendment adopted on motion of Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), Massachusetts, prohibiting sale of liquor on Sundays, except on prescription, brought immediate protest from George E. Keneipp, acting president of the Chamber of Commerce of the District. The question should be left to decision of the Commissioners, as provided in the House bill, Mr. Keneipp said.

Would Cause Loss Here.

He pointed out that sale of beverages would be restricted under the law and that denial of the privilege of buying drinks with meals in Washington on Sunday would cause many persons to go elsewhere for their meals on that day.

Opposition of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes Alliance of the District was voiced by Charles E. Sands. The Walsh amendment, Mr. Sands said, would send into Maryland thousands of persons who dine out with their families or friends on Sundays.

"We don't object to a reasonable amendment, limiting the hours during which drinks may be served on Sunday—say, after church hours—but the Walsh amendment will work a hardship on Washington hotels and restaurants," he said.

"It also will help perpetuate the bootlegger. He will be able to make enough on Sunday to keep him going all week if we have unreasonable restrictions. We are going to ask the conferees to eliminate or modify the amendment."

Treasury Invites Bids On $125,000,000 Bills

Secretary Morgenthau yesterday invited bids for a $125,000,000 issue of 91-day Treasury bills, the Associated Press reports.

The bills will be dated January 24 and mature April 25. Bids will be received at Federal Reserve Banks and branches up to 2 p. m., Eastern standard time, Monday, January 22.

An Affair of Honor Stirs House Chiefs

mittee in the first place occupies seven columns in the Congressional Record today, was believed to lean toward a favorable verdict for the Coinage, Weights and Measures side.

Anybody's Game.

But owing to Chairman Steagall's last minute maneuver yesterday — comparable to running for a touch down even though the other side thought they had the ball—it was admittedly anyone's game.

"It's up to the House," Representative Byrns said last night. "It's a situation I never heard of before."

The battle for the bill started when President Roosevelt's measure to recapture the gold in Federal Reserve Banks and revalue the dollar was sent to Congress.

Chairman Steagall got the jump, as he had been one of the leaders summoned to the White House last Sunday night to hear the President explain the measure. As a result, Chairman Steagall's name went on the bill.

When Chairman Somers, who spent the week-end in New York and missed the White House conference, heard about this, he was wroth, indeed. Urged on by members of his committee, he rushed to the House with a 5-foot shelf of briefs showing why the House Coinage, Weights and Measures Committee should have precedent and get the measure. Chairman Steagall countered with an even more imposing mountain of briefs, which were stacked so high upon the Speaker's rostrum it was with difficulty that Mr. Rainey made himself heard over the rostrum.

Coinage Wins Ruling.

The Speaker's seven-column ruling sent the bill to the coinage committee, but so loud and vehement were the squawks from the Banking and Currency side that Mr. Rainey offered Chairman Steagall an opportunity yesterday to make a motion to overrule the Chair.

Instead of doing so, Chairman Steagall stalked from the House and closed his office door behind him with a bang. Things looked bright for the coinage committee, and it prepared to resume hearings Friday.

But behind his tightly slammed office door, Chairman Steagall and his fellow committeemen were far from quitting. They resurrected the Goldsborough bill, H. R. 5073, once passed by the House and rejected by the Senate.

2 Democratic Leaders Quit; Party Rocked

Walker and Jackson Out; Roosevelt Scores Personal Gain.

these official duties would be increased considerably.

"The resignation was accepted by Mr. James A. Farley, chairman of the committee.

"It was not intended that formal announcement should be made until a successor was selected."

Suggestions that Postmaster General Farley, who is also chairman of the Democratic National committee, might be subjected to increasing pressure to give up one of his two jobs followed in the wake of the excitement. Mr. Farley declined to comment as he did some time ago when Senator George Norris, of Nebraska, made such a demand publicly.

Both Roosevelt Supporters.

Both Walker and Jackson were original Roosevelt men and have been his intimate political supporters. Their cases are not parallel in that the purpose of Walker's resignation was to clear him of political connections so that he could devote his full time to the Government, whereas Mr. Jackson has abandoned his political connections so that he might be more free to push his law practice without embarrassment to himself or to the Administration.

Other changes were expected to follow. It was evident tonight that President Roosevelt has decided he will attempt to put an end to the sale of alleged political influence around Washington. Due to repeated complaints from heads of various departments, the situation had ripened until it needed only the pin-prick from the White House to spill out. President Roosevelt mentioned no names, but these were liberally supplied in the gossip which flowed through the Capital last night.

Indications developed that the President's action would encourage a backfire against Gen. Farley in the Senate committee investigating political aspects of air mail contracts under the previous Administration. Republican members of the committee said they would investigate the financing of the recent airplane flight which Mr. Farley and a party of Postoffice Department officials made to Texas last fall.

Depend on Influence.

National committeemen draw no salaries. Some of them depend upon the influence of such positions to help them in the practice of law, in representing clients before Government departments in Washington.

Mr. Jackson disclosed last night that only recently he had turned down a huge retainer offered on behalf of Max Rosenberg, Chicago racketeer, who died last week while under indictment for income tax evasion. In another instance, a gangster offered a national committeeman a fabulous fee for help in escaping a jail sentence, but was turned down.

But Washington hotel rooms house many party politicians who are here for big fees on less brazen cases. The dishing out of billions of Public Works money, the large income taxes at stake in the Government's drive against evaders, the dickering over closed banks and the business involved in numerous other Government activities, have drawn politicians with real or alleged influence in swarms.

Warnings Are Repeated.

Government officials have been so harassed by this horde of political lawyers that they have been compelled to issue repeated public warnings that no attention would be paid to political pull. Secretary of Treasury Morgenthau, Secretary of Interior Ickes, Harry Hopkins, of CWA, and John H. Fahey, of the Home Owners Loan Corporatoin, all have publicly warned individuals with business before their organizations that it was not necessary to be victimized by political lawyers to get action.

The three musketeers on the Democratic National committee, whose law practices grew most conspicuously here since the new Administration came in, were Mr. Jackson, Arthur F. Mullen, of Nebraska, and J. Bruce Kremer, of Montana.

Kremer, suave, handsome veteran on the National committee, handed in his resignation from the National committee about January 1. He explained that inasmuch as he intends to practice law here permanently, he expected to have no opportunity to continue party work.

Unaffected By Request.

The second committeeman, Mr. Mullen, was on his way West last night and could not be reached for comment. A large, loose-jointed, slow-moving, jovial figure in many Democratic National conventions, and Roosevelt floor manager in the last one, he may be seen almost any day ambling into one of the Government departments.

Whereas some of the lawyers here use "outside men" to follow up their cases, Mr. Mullen usually wanders in casually and talks directly with the key official. And so persuasive is he that it is reported he has made a six-figure fortune since last March. Recently, calls for his resignation from the Democratic National committee came from Nebraska, but he only grunted and paid no attention to them.

Mr. Mullen was offered a judgeship by President Roosevelt early in the Administration. He promptly turned it down as he was expected to, but found the advertising very helpful getting his Washington law practice under full steam.

Mr. Jackson said yesterday he had taken part in distributing patronage and that he had represented no client in matters that would conflict with the Administration's program.

A Lavish Entertainer.

"I found that the office of secretary was a serious handicap and an embarrassment in representing clients," he said.

However embarrassing it may have been, Mr. Jackson has been able to survive the difficulties. Since he came here with the new Administration and opened a law office, he has become one of Washington's most lavish entertainers. His hospitality and his stories and his guest lists, which have read like a directory of the New Deal, have made him one of the most prominent figures in Washington. His daughter recently married a relative of Mrs. Roosevelt.

A minor development of the day was the disclosure that Emil Hurja, an intimate political lieutenant of Postmaster General Farley, was leaving the Interior Department, where his presence had at the start struck a jarring note in Secretary Ickes' attempt to keep politics out of PWA. There was no indication, however, that his retirement was due to pressure from Mr. Ickes. On the contrary, it was understood Farley needed him to bolster up the Democratic National committee organization. Whether he will succeed Mr. Jackson as secretary of the committee was not indicated.

Numerous other Democratic National committeemen are spending much time in Washington attending to matters before Government departments. One of them has been Orman W. Ewing, of Utah. Another member of the committee has a son-in-law who practices law here.

Resigns From Committee.

Varying the usual practice, Max Gardner recently opened law offices here, and as he did so, he announced his resignation from the Democratic National committee. On the other hand, another member of the committee who wished to operate here, lacked the legal qualifications to appear in a legal capacity, so he began burning midnight oil over a law-cramming course and recently took the bar examinations in the District of Columbia.

Dudley Doolittle, Kansas National committeeman, has maintained a law office here for years. John F. Costello, committeeman for the District of Columbia, also has a law office here. Many other committeemen, whether lawyers or not, make frequent trips to the Capital to represent constituents.

Some in the Administration have become increasingly alarmed over the dangers of wire pulling activities in the light of the Senate investigation of the awarding of air-mail contracts under the previous Administration. The present clean-up campaign is regarded by some as a move to forestall any retaliatory inquisitiveness on the part of Republicans.

Insiders here have not forgotten that in 1926 the House Ways and Means Committee swooped down on the Alien Property Custodian's office and made public its records of lawyers who had obtained fees for assisting in disposing of seized German property just after the war. Incidentally, this is the first time since those dying days of the Wilson Administration that some of the Democratic lawyers shown in those lists have been able to return to easy money around Washington.

Bernard Warning Cited.

Warning of trouble came recently from Secretary Ickes, who notified his entire organization that James Bernard was persona non grata. Bernard was alleged to have threatened to use political influence at Washington to foster certain projects in Florida, which the governor of that State opposed. Bernard's relations with Mr. Jackson were not definitely established and hints that he was an outside man for the New Hampshire committeeman brought disclaimers from both parties.

Recently, the Home Owners Loan Corporation removed one of its State managers because it was alleged he was allowing political influence, including that of his National committeeman, to interfere with his work of relieving hard-pressed home owners.

One voice has been raised here in protest against the general castigation by Administration officials of the "practice of law" in Washington. F. R. Noel, new head of the District of Columbia Bar Association, in an address this week following his election, said officials like Secretary Ickes were casting unfair slurs on the professions as a whole.

No Exception Made.

"Of course, if shysters, politicians in the guise of lawyers and downright lobbyists," he said, "are annoying public officials by methods approaching bribery, even the bar association would join in an outraged cry to throw them out. But these statements, as put in currency through the press, make no exception between high-class and ethical lawyers and so-called lawyers."

Secretary Ickes had bundled up his indictment in one statement, as follows: "The easiest money in Washington is being collected by lawyers, agents, lobbyists and politicians of supposed influence with the PWA, and in spite of warnings sent out, they are able, I am informed, to collect large sums of money in the way of retainers and fees.

"Money paid to such persons is money thrown away. The fact is, if it is known here that people are being employed to advance projects, we are likely to look with suspicion upon such projects."

Files Destroyed, Witnesses Tell Air Mail Probers

Associated Press Photos.

Senate airmail investigators were told yesterday by Paul Braniff (left), Oklahoma City, that a company charging a higher rate was awarded an airmail contract over the bid of his independent airline. R. L. Jones, former secretary to W. Irving Glover, second assistant Postmaster General in the Hoover Administration, identifies for the committee files lacking correspondence, which J. J. Doran, Postoffice Department inspector (right), declared had been destroyed at Glover's instance.

Witness Tells Mail Probe Glover Had Files Burned

on the heels of previous testimony that former Postmaster General Brown had ordered the same fate for his documents a few days before he retired last March 4.

Glover Phoned Johns.

Delving further into what one committee member termed the "Postoffice holocaust," investigators will probably institute a search for the "official" records as differentiated from the destroyed "personal" ones.

From New York last week Brown denied that he had ordered official correspondence destroyed, saying it was all personal.

Sunday night Glover returned from New York, telephoned to Johns and said to him, according to the witness:

"Those were all personal files of mine, and you know it."

Johns, who has been in the Postoffice Department 22 years, is now detailed to the office of the Postmaster General.

Two Republican members of the committee, Senators White, of Maine, and Austin, of Vermont, frequently interrupted Black during his questioning and undertook a defensive cross-examination of the witness. It was at their suggestion that Glover will be called to defend his position.

From Renschler, official of the United Aircraft Transfort Corporation, a large holding company, which, among numerous other subsidiaries, controls United Air Lines, the committee learned details of high finance in the aviation industry.

Motor Stock Soared.

Renschler said that he bought 1,375 shares of common Pratt-Whitney Aircraft stock in 1927 at 20 cents a share. Through a stock dividend payment and late the merger of Pratt-Whitney with the United Air Lines, his stock finally evolved into 219,604 United Aircraft shares.

On May 1, 1929, the market value of these shares was $35,575,000. Later Renschler sold 169,604 shares for a profit of $9,514,869. His remaining shares, valued at the current market quotation of the stock, are worth $2,100,000.

He further admitted that his salary for the years 1929-33 always amounted to over $100,000 a year, and one year he received more than $400,000 in salary and directors' fees.

During the same years, he said, the holding company and its various affiliates paid substantial stock dividends and liberal bonuses to officers and directors.

After reading a long list of United Aircraft subsidiaries, which included plane and accessories manufacturing companies, aluminum companies, airplane insurance companies, and operating companies, Senator Black revealed that the United Air Lines had received a total of $40,174,000 from the Government for carrying airmail since 1926.

The United Air Lines operates the north transcontinental route from New York to San Francisco.

Subsidy Aided Salaries.

Severely pressed by Black, Renschler admitted that he "didn't suppose" such salaries, such spectacular rises in stock value, and such dividend payments could have taken place without the Government aid.

Renschler said the operating costs of his line was between 55 and 60 cents a mile, which Black promptly compared with the earlier testimony of an independent air line operator, who has not received an air-mail contract, that he could operate his planes for 15½ cents a mile.

When Senator Austin pointed out that perhaps the operating cost could be reduced by lowering pilots' wages, Black eagerly drew from the witness that his company had had several pilots' strikes, the latest occuring last fall.

Renschler also revealed that United Aircraft owned a considerable amount of stock in the Aluminum Company of America, and that D. K. E. Bruce, son-in-law of Andrew Mellon, who controls the aluminum concern, was on the board of directors of United Aircraft.

"Isn't it true that a high operating cost may be partially caused by the price paid for aluminum for planes?" asked Black.

"Possibly," said the witness.

May Question Farley.

Republican committee members indicated last night they would ask to have Postmaster General Farley summoned before the committee to explain an airplane trip he made to Texas last October. Senator Austin said he understood it was made on a plane owned by a subsidized company and that the Postmaster and his aids traveled free.

Black said he had not yet been requested to call Farley.

Today's leading witness will be William Sachs, Republican leader of St. Louis, who, according to previous testimony, offered to help an air line operator secure a Government contract in consideration of a 5 per cent commission. Frank Robertson, brother and partner of the operator who implicated Sachs, and George Mead, official of the United Aircraft, will be among the other witnesses.

Chief Executive To Ask Billion More for Relief

Fund Expected to Carry Works Through to New Fiscal Year.

need for continued appropriations to prevent "demobilization" of the army of Government-paid workers. They were concerned lest—if present intentions to end civil works by May 1 and restrict public works are carried out—recovery gains be lost.

In the opinion of Senator La Follette, the danger was as much psychological as economic, since he believed any relaxatoin would "push back on relief" the thousands to whom made-work has inspired hope. The Wisconsin Senator already has disclosed he would seek additional billions—perhaps $5,000,000,000—for public works, but he said no such sum was discussed with the President.

Granted $400,000,000 initially from public works funds, the Civil Works Administratoin under Harry L. Hopkins will be the first recovery agency to run out of money if the Administration pursues its already announced policy of tapering it off by climatic zones this spring, beginning in the warmer South, an additional $350,000,000 will be needed.

Plans Not Definite.

Since neither the $1,166,000,000 sought for this fiscal year not the $2,000,000,000 included for emergency purposes in next year's budget have been broken down, Mr. Roosevelt's intentions in regards to public works are not yet definite. He intends to await developments before deciding on next year's allocations, if Congress is willing, but is understood to be prepared to split up the more immediate sum in his next recommendations.

Whatever proportion might be set aside for public works in either figure will not satisfy some supporters of this remedy for depression. Senators LaFollette and Costigan, while undecided as yet on any definite figure, are preparing to press for additional amounts, and Senator Wagner is understood to favor at least $2,000,000,000 more to continue the present scale of operations.

These appropriations would be in addition to the allocation to be proposed by the President, and would swell the expected two-year deficit of nearly $10,000,000,000 by exactly the amount obtained. So far, the President has consistently opposed any increase in the budget, which some believe was prepared partly with the view to frightening away such proposals.

Original Finds Allotted.

On the other hand the original $3,300,000,000 has now been allocated by the Public Works Administration and an almost equal amount of applications are still on file. Since most, if not all, future appropriations will be to continue projects already begun, Administrator Harold L. Ickes himself is understood to be sympathetic to those who would enlarge the Administration's program.

Meanwhile, Mr. Roosevelt disclosed he had gone over with Mr. Hopkins complaints from certain sections of the country that relatively high wages paid civil workers are drawing labor from private employment. The administrator, he said, is preparing a plan to curtail hours in such localities, to bring civil works wages slightly below prevalent levels.

In divulging that emergency appropriation would be his next legislative request, the President also said he did not expect to write his war debts message for about a month. Also, he will confer with Secretary of State Cordell Hull, en route home from Montevideo, before transmitting his tariff message.

Transportation Held Up.

Reports are awaited before the President will release to Congress the troublesome problems of transportation and communications legislation, as well as stock exchange regulation. The Administration still has in mind the consolidation of all transportation—motor buses, aviation, waterways and railways—under the Interstate Commerce Commission, he said.

The President conferred later in the day with Joseph B. Eastman, Federal rail coordinator, who said he would have his report on the railways ready in a few days. Another and more comprehensive report on embodying all of transportation will be submitted later.

Recognition in Question.

Thereafter, Grau San Martin offered him a cabinet post, which also was refused. He subsequently accepted the deanship of the university.

The question of recognition appeared to be merely a matter of guessing, since Jefferson Caffery, President Roosevelt's personal representative here, remained a neutral observer.

Apparently the only major obstacle to a change was the disorganized forces of Dr. Guiteras.

CWA Registry Under Scrutiny In Hagerstown

Many Quit Jobs to Get Better Ones, Says Stouffer.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 17 (Spl.). Request for investigators to check on registration of unemployed here will be made by Brewer L. Stouffer, manager of the local Federal Reemployment Bureau, as the result of evidence that many are registering, who either have jobs or means of livlihood. Two investigators have been assigned to the Cumberland Bureau.

Registrants here have quit jobs in order to obtain better ones through the reemployment service, it is said. Farmers have also registered, seeking work when it is impossible to till farm land.

Sixteen Public Works and Civil Works projects, at a $90,000 expenditure, are under way at Camp Ritchie, Cascade, Maryland's National Guard Camp. When completed, the camp will be one of the finest military reservations in the country.

There are 275 men at work now, including seven Federal projects under the PWA involving a cost of $38,100, and nine CWA State of Maryland projects, according to Capt. Robert F. Barrick, camp custodian.

The money will come through a grant from the War Department. Some of the work has been transferred from the PWA to the CWA to speed the program. All projects under the former must be completed by June 30.

The PWA projects include the erection of two mess halls, bathhouse and storehouse; fence around reservoir; grading of Regimental Area No. 2, and changing windows in buildings in Area No. 1; building of fence around sewage disposal plant; concrete curb and gutter along lower regimental road, fence around storehouse yard and reconditioning of four target pits.

The CWA projects include grading, curb, gutter and masonry work, road building, tent repairing and reconditioning target ranges.

There is also a general program, which includes brigade headquarters building erection, as well as 2 miles of new roads on the reservation.

Two hundred and twenty-five of the men are from Hagerstown and Washington County and the remainder from Frederick County.

Boys Helped

Bristol Will Inaugurate "Big Brother" Plan.

Bristol, Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.).—Plans for the "Big Brother" movement here, under which citizens hope to combat juvenile delinquency, were advanced yesterday at a meeting of the committee under Mrs. Margery Wyatt, Federal relief worker. The movement may get under way soon.

The plan is to assign each boy to a man who, through advice, encouragement and moral direction, keeps him out of trouble and improves his behavior and attitude toward society. Such practices as loafing about the streets late at night, begging and truancy from school are particularly to be eradicated.

Drunk Driver Given Year's Term in Jail

Maryland Court Fines Washington Man and Companion.

Leonardtown, Md., Jan. 17 (Spl.). Howard Williams, 23, of Washington, was fined $100 and sentenced to 12 months in the Maryland House of Correction for drunk driving and fined $25 for leaving the scene of accident, in a trial held at Hollywood last night.

Howard Bonifant, of Takoma Park, also was fined $25 for allowing Williams to drive his car while drunk, and $10 for leaving scene of the accident.

They bumped Mr. Raymond Dixon's car several times, it is claimed, and then pushed the car at a rapid speed down the road. Mrs. Dixon was so terrified that she tried to turn off the road and was forcing the car up a 15-foot embankment. Bonifant is in the Leonardtown jail.

Burns Victim Dies.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.).—Hayes Taylor, colored, is under arrest in Caroline County on charges of assault and is expected to be rearraigned on a charge of manslaughter following the death in the hospital here yesterday of Rosie Shelton, 23, Caroline colored woman, from the effects of burns received during a fight between Taylor and her husband in her home near Thomas Store, November 24.

Faces Removal to Atlanta.

Roanoke, Jan. 17 (AP).—An order of removal to Atlanta, Ga., was entered here this morning by United States Commissioner Charles O. Fox, jr., in the case of Mrs. Clara Doss, of Damascus, who was brought here yesterday from Schoolfield, Va., where she had been arrested by Federal agents on a warrant charging conspiracy to smuggle contraband into the Federal prison at Atlanta.

The removal order was sent to Harrisonburg for Judge John Paul's signature.

Mrs. Doss and her husband, Dewey, who was arrested Monday night in Abingdon, will stand trial with several other persons who were arrested in connection with an alleged plot in which narcotics were said to have been smuggled into the prison.

Store Robbers Sentenced.

Covington, Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.). Nine indictments were returned by the grand jury at the opening of Alleghany County Circuit Court here.

County to Oust CWA Workers Who Buy Rum

Prince William Employes Can Not "Throw Their Money Away."

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.). Civil Works employes in Prince William County who spend their money to buy whisky will be discharged immediately "for throwing their money away," County Administrator C. C. Clore announced. He stated that he would replace those spending their money to buy liquor with persons "more worthy of the jobs."

The administrator announced a pay roll for last week aggregating $17,237.45, to 1,170 men employed. The Federal project at Quantico Marine Base absorbed 831 of the total, while others were engaged on projects located in Quantico, Manassas, Occoquan, Nokesville, Haymarket and Dumfries.

Inspector Assumes Duties.

Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.). C. V. Heath, of Bridgewater, formerly of Baltimore, today began his duties as project inspector for the Civil Works Administration in Rockingham County.

More than 1,200 men are at work this week in various projects in Rockingham. The principal work is that on school buildings and grounds, entailing an expenditure of $60,000.

Front Royal Work Begins.

Front Royal, Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.).—Work has started on the latest civil works project approved for Warren County, the improvement of the U. S. Government property at the Front Royal Remount Depot.

About 100 men are at work, and this number will be increased to around 200. They will have employment on this project for five weeks, under a $23,000 allocation.

Another 100 men are repairing and improving school buildings and grounds in the county. The sum of $10,341 has been allowed for this work.

Safety Classes Open.

Woodstock, Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.).—Dr. F. Wilson Gearing today began a series of classes in first aid and general safety measures in connection with the Civil Works Administration projects in Woodstock and Shenandoah County. The instruction will be under auspices of the Red Cross.

One man from each CWA project has been appointed by the foreman to take the ten-day course. Dr. Gearing will hold classes in the Woodstock Fire House.

J. S. Covington, Culpeper, Dies

Banker and Dairyman, 65, Survived by Widow and Two Sisters.

Culpeper, Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.).—John Strother Covington, 65, president of the Culpeper National Bank and councilman, dairyman, stock dealer and owner of historic Catalpa Farm, where the Culpeper Minute Men were organized in 1775, died from a heart attack today at his town residence.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Lillian Biggers Covington, who was at his bedside, and two sisters, Mrs. C. H. Tinsley, of Culpeper, and Mrs. Thomas Lewis, of Missouri.

The funeral will be held from the Culpeper Baptist Church Thursday afternoon with interment in the family section of Fairview Cemetery.

Repairs Slated For Armories Over Maryland

CWA Projects to Include 18 Buildings; Other Jobs Progress.

Frederick, Md., Jan. 17 (Spl.). Forty more men were put to work today building a road and making other improvements at the local airport, which will require 44 days. Seven CWA projects are now employing 250 men in the city and 400 others in Frederick County.

Repairs and improvements to the armory costing $5,000 have been approved and will begin within ten days. Brig. Gen. Milton A. Reckord has had approved repairs to each of the 18 armories of the First Regiment, Maryland National Guard, to be carried out under direction of Col. D. John Markey, this city, commander of the regiment. Four of these projects, including armories here, in Hagerstown, Centerville and Bel Air, were approved yesterday.

Other city projects making headway include a large storm sewer, concrete paving, curb and gutter laying, building a new road on Carroll Parkway between Jefferson street and West College Terrace. Twenty men are improving the road at the Fishing Creek Dam, the city's water supply, and 20 others are working on the road at the new Linganore Creek filteration plant.

The Frederick Red Cross chapter, through Judge Russell E. Lighter, chairman, and Edward S. Delaplaine, secretary, have arranged CWA safety instruction classes at the armory. About 50 men already are taking the instruction in the Frederick group, one of 30 established over the State.

Forty-five Federal Government checks for farmers under the National Recovery Administration wheat control plan, aggregating $2,000, arrived yesterday at the office of Henry R. Shoemaker, county agent. The first 1,800 checks aggregated more than $95,000. Another consignment of $30,000 will arrive this spring.

Fraud in Cumberland.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 17 (Spl.).—Two investigators have been added to the reeemployment bureau staff here announces Capt. Harry E. Flook, manager, to check registration of men who do not live in Allegany County, or otherwise are not entitled to be listed. The appointees are Joseph H. Vernay and John B. LaManca.

Capt. Flook says eleven men registered at the offices, giving a local address, which proved to be a barber shop, and later all the men were found to live in Ridgeley, W. Va., opposite this city.

Mrs. George G. Young, wife of the postmaster, has become volunteer director of activities for the employment of idle women under the CWA. Committees from women's groups will be named.

A survey of all property in the city as to liability was started today. The CWA will furnish ten people, the survey to require a month. The work is supervised by City Auditor Frank A. Wolfhope.

There are now 1,646 people employed on CWA projects in Allegany County and the weekly pay roll is more than $18,000.

The brick residence on Washington street opposite the courthouse, once the Allegany County Jail, is being repaired and will be occupied by the county CWA offices.

Instruction in first aid is being given men from 42 CWA projects in the county. The work is directed by Karl G. Perry, chairman, and Ernest O. Robinette, assistant.

Truck With 34 Upsets Near Norfolk; 20 Hurt

Norfolk, Jan. 17 (AP).—More than 20 persons were injured, several seriously, early today when a truck loaded with 34 colored men and women overturned near Edmonds Corner, on Route 27, 6 miles from here.

The injured were brought to St. Vincent's Hospital, most being discharged after first aid.

Skeletons Found Buried in Street

CWA Men in Charles Town Dig Up Ancient Bones.

Charles Town, W. Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.).—Three human skeletons, believed to antedate the Civil War, were found buried in one of the town's oldest streets here by CWA street workers.

The bones were uncovered by Edgar Green, Edgar Welch and James Carr while working on a sewer on Church street, which has existed as a roadway within the memory of the town's oldest inhabitants.

Belief that the bodies had been buried in a regulation manner rather than to hide an act of violence was expressed by Loyal Anderson, commissioner of streets, because of their uniform distance below the surface and because all were laid facing eastward. Anderson ordered the remains to be left undisturbed.

Coleman Again Sent to Bench

Six Judges Are Nominated in Virginia Without Opposition.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.). Judge Frederick W. Coleman was renominated without opposition last night by the Democratic caucus of the General Assembly of Virginia, to preside over the fifteenth judicial circuit and corporation court, of Fredericksburg, for another six-year term, beginning February 1.

Five other judges were named. This action is normally equivalent to election.

Judge Coleman has presided over the fifteenth circuit since he was appointed by Gov. Trinkle in 1925, to succeed the late Judge R. H. L. Chichester.

Among signficant decisions handed down by Judge Coleman was the precedent establishing verdict when he ruled the State law fixing maximum speed limits for automobiles was invalid. Judge Coleman attracted Nation-wide attention when he appointed a Negro to sit on a Hanover County jury last October.

Judge Coleman has seldom been reversed. The fifteenth circuit comprises the Circuit Courts of Hanover, Caroline, Stafford, King George and Spotsylvania Counties.

Petersburg, Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.). Judge Marshall R. Peterson, of the third judicial circuit of Virginia, presiding over the courts in Brunswick, Greensville and Prince Georges Counties and the City of Petersburg, has been renominated without opposition by the General Assembly. Judge Peterson's home is in Lawrenceville.

Wreck Details Killing Youths Told by Deputy

Renner Blames Fugitive From Jail as One Who Hit Him on Head.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 17 (Spl.). Telling for the first time the details of the attack on him last Thursday, which cost the lives of two prisoners he was bringing to Hagerstown for questioning, Deputy Sheriff Richard Renner named Orval M. Oliver, one of the two killed, as the one who struck him on the head, causing him to lose control of the car.

Deputy Renner still is in a serious condition from injuries received in the crash.

Clyde O. Mellotte was the other prisoner killed. A bloody jack handle, believed to have been the weapon used, was found in the wrecked car. Renner did not recall anything until he regained consciousness as he was being removed from the wrecked car.

The deputy said he did not know the reputation of the two youths or what they were wanted for when he placed them under arrest. He said both apparently were reconciled to arrest and agreed to come here for questioning. Both were alone in the rear seat, not handcuffed, with Renner driving.

The three crates of chickens found in the car in which the two youths were traveling were stolen in Allegany County, local officers announced today. The officers also wanted to question the youths about a store robbery in Fulton County, Pa., the same week.

The police have failed to learn where Mellotte, who escaped last November from the Bedford jail, contacted Oliver, who had a good reputation at his home in Athens County, Ohio. The automobile in which they were traveling was stolen near Akron, Ohio.

Five Madison County Land Payments Made

Richmond, Jan. 17 (AP). — First payments to citizens of Madison County for land in the Shenandoah National Park area were made yesterday by State Treasurer John M. Purcell when he mailed five checks totaling $21,000.

Land purchased for the park in Madison has been valued at $235,000 by the courts.

*Cecil Brandt is to die—is to be hanged in Wandsworth Gaol—for the murder of Benham, one of his wife's friends. One man alone in England has the power to intercede for him: the young Home Secretary, Sir Humphrey Rossitor. He believes Brandt is guilty, should die. * * * Following a visit to two old friends—Sir Edward Keynsham and his sister, Lady Louise, at Keynsham Hall in Norfolk Sir Humphrey starts for London, in a hired limousine. It is night. Brandt's execution is set for 8 o'clock the following morning. On the road, a band of men, wearing white masks, seize Sir Humphrey.*

*If (his captors inform him) he does not agree to intercede for Brandt, he himself will die—at once. A man of courage and the utmost integrity, he yields only when told that Brandt's wife has new evidence to offer * * **

Pastor Praised At University In Synod Plea

Drive to Retain Stewart Despite "Modernist" Views Gaining.

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.). Cheered by strong support in many quarters, local Presbyterians are working to retain the Rev. Donald H. Stewart in his religious work at the University of Virginia, it was learned today.

The synod's committee on religious work at the university, meeting in Richmond several days ago, indorsed this movement and mapped out a course of action intended to keep Mr. Stewart here. It also agreed to continue its financial support of the work.

This may result in an appeal to the synod from the West Hanover Presbytery's action in disbarring Mr. Stewart from "official status" in the presbytery, following two examinations on theology, by a 30-to-6 vote at the meeting of presbytery at Buckingham Courthouse December 12.

University leaders, in letters to local members of this synod's committee, of which Thomas L. Rosser, jr., is a member, have praised the work which Mr. Stewart is doing among the students and have expressed concern over his possible loss. President John L. Newcomb, Dean John L. Manahan, Prof. J. C. Metcalf, acting dean of students; Ivey F. Lewis, and Librarian Harry Clemons are among the writers.

President Concerned.

"I am very much concerned over the possible loss to this community of the Rev. Donald H. Stewart," said Dr. Lewis. "Every university in the United States is constantly watching for the exceptional man.

"Only a very rare person can really get hold of students and guide their actions and thoughts on the highest plane. Mr. Stewart is such a man. As the boys say, he has everything. Handsome, impressive, able, sympathetic, popular, he is also truly a man of God.

"In the loss of a man like Mr. Stewart the whole Christian position will be weakened. College students may be foolish, but they are not fools, and they will be the first to feel the deadly blow that Mr. Stewart's withdrawal will deal to the forces which are now struggling with greater or less success to maintain a high standard of morality and behavior in the student body."

Dean Manahan Protests.

Said Dr. Manahan:

"I consider Mr. Stewart the best prepared in every way, for his type of work, of any young man I have known during my 17 years as a member of the faculty of the university. He is a gentleman of strong personality, superior intellect and with unquestionable earnestness in his work. In addition to these qualities I feel he possesses a spiritual vision far beyond that of many of his contemporaries and one which could not be other than an influence for good upon those with whom he would come in contact.

"As a member of the Presbyterian Church of Charlottesville I consider it most unfortunate that the recent action of Presbytery was taken. If this action is to be allowed to deprive our university students of the services and leadership of Mr. Stewart, it will, in my judgment, be a step backward, spiritually, in the life of the university and of the church.

Region Farm Loan Union Is Planned

Credit Group Planned at Charlottesville.

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.). A production credit association for Albemarle, Greene, Orange and Madison Counties will be organized in Charlottesville Monday. T. O. Scott, county agricultural agent, announced.

Loans made through the local association will be for general agricultural purposes. It is supplemental to the Fruit Growers Production Credit Association, which is being set up for Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania and Delaware.

Dent Heard, Maryland Victim of Auto, Buried

Leonardtown, Md., Jan. 17 (Spl.). Funeral services were held today at Our Lady's Chapel, Medley's Neck, for Dent Heard, 24, who was killed Saturday in an automobile accident near Clinton. He was buried in the chapel cemetery.

Mr. Heard, a native of St. Marys County, is survived by his father, Charles Heard, well-known farmer of St. Marys County; one sister, Mrs. Tester Woodburn, of Clements; two brothers, Joseph Heard, of Medleys Neck and Bean Heard, of Washington.

Democrat Proposed For Allegany Position

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 17 (Spl.). John G. Shearer, Cumberland, commissioner of finance, has been recommended to Gov. Ritchie by the Democratic State central committee of Allegany County for appointment as county commissioner to succeed the late Henry A. Bachman, Republican.

Shearer's appointment would give Democrats their first member of the board in years.

Third Dividend Planned By Hagerstown Bank

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 17 (Spl.). Claude Gilbert, receiver for the First National Bank, announced a third dividend of 12 per cent will be paid to depositors of the closed institution within the next 30 days.

The payment was authorized today by the Comptroller of the Currency. The first payment was 20 per cent, the second 18 per cent, of deposits.

State Will Aid Eastern Shore Lynch Inquiry

Ready to Cooperate With Grand Jury Evidence Tuesday.

Princess Anne, Md., Jan. 17 (AP). Assurance came today from State officials, unsuccessful in their own investigation of the George Armwood lynching, that they would cooperate with Somerset County officials in presenting evidence to the grand jury next Tuesday.

State's Attorney John B. Robins, of Somerset County, has invited Attorney General William Preston Lane, jr., to be present, and has sent summonses to State police who battled the mob that dragged the Negro from the jail here October 18.

Besides offering the State's aid, Gov. Albert C. Ritchie rebuked State's Attorney Robins for delay in opening the grand jury investigation.

Armwood, Negro, who was accused of attacking an aged white woman on October 16, was hanged near the town limits here by a mob of more than 1,000 persons.

After none of the members of the mob was identified at an inquest and county officials declined to follow the suggestion of the State as to the manner of procedure, Gov. Ritchie sent 300 National Guardsmen to the Eastern Shore.

Four suspects, named by Attorney General Lane, were arrested by the militia and taken to the Baltimore City Jail. Habeas corpus proceedings in circuit court here won their freedom the following day.

Retailer Ready To Fight Code

Gas Dealer Denies Power of Government Over Intrastate Trade.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 17 (Spl.). Herman L. Mills, who operates gasoline stations in three cities and is cited in Government injunction proceedings for alleged violation of the oil code, announced today he was prepared to carry the case to the United States Supreme Court. He believes the Government is without authority over an independent intrastate business. Mills is alleged to have given premiums with purchases.

Mills is cited to show cause why the Government should not be granted an injunction Monday, January 22, before Judge W. Calvin Chestnut in Baltimore next Thursday.

He announced he plans to demur on the ground the Constitution does not delegate to Congress any power to legislate in regard to purely intrastate business and the proceedings are, therefore, unconstitutional.

Mills said that it has been his practice to give premiums to purchasers for years; that he was a strong advocate of competitive business and feels the action of the Government under the NRA tends to eliminate legitimate competition.

St. Marys Parents Bury Son, One of 13 Children

Leonardtown, Md., Jan. 17 (Spl.). Funeral services were held today at St. John's Church, Hollywood, for Martin Abell, 28, who died Tuesday at Sabillasville. Interment was in the cemetery adjoining.

Mr. Abell is survived by his widow, Mrs. Gertrude Greenwell Abell; his parents Mr. and Mrs. John Abell; seven brothers and five sisters.

Boy, 12, 'Asleep' Four Months, Puzzles Doctors at Richmond

Richmond, Jan. 17 (AP).—Unconscious for more than four months, Robert Richardson, jr., 12, of Amelia County, lies in a hospital here staring blankly into space, a victim of encephalitis lethargica — sleeping sickness.

The lad contracted the malady following an attack of influenza, hospital attendants said, and since his admission has lain silently, barely moving, while medical science seeks to find a cure. At first glance the child seems perfectly conscious.

Physicians say the disease is a different type of sleeping sickness from that which took a toll of more than 140 lives in St. Louis several months ago. The case here, they pointed out, is less violent and seems to be isolated, and whether it is contagious is not definitely known.

Opinion is divided as to the outcome of the case. One physician said chances for recovery are good, adding that the child may rally at any moment. Others are not so hopeful, pointing out that he has not responded favorably to treatment.

Last month the boy was able to swallow a small amount of liquid nourishment, which was regarded at first by his nurse as a sign of improvement, but the attending doctor said that this action was "purely mechanical." His only nourishment now is given by means of nasal feeding.

Strasburg Votes For White Way

Mass Meeting Decides Also to Ask for Town Manager.

Strasburg, Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.). Citizens of Strasburg in mass meeting have decided that they want a "white way" along the business section and that the Legislature should amend the charter of the municipality to provide for a town manager in addition to the present mayor-council form of government.

More than 100 citizens attended the meeting. F. C. Stover, a member of the town council, advocated the "white way" and was supported by Abe Stickley, another councilman.

With but one dissenting vote, a resolution was adopted providing for borrowing not more than $3,500 for the "white way" on King street from Massanutten street to Sharp street.

To retire the loan, the citizens voted in favor of an additional levy of 10 cents per $100 valuation on real estate for the current year.

The resolution requesting the State Legislature to amend the town's charter to provide for a town manager was introduced by Councilman Stover and passed by unanimous vote. Councilman Stover also suggested a municipal electric plant. No action was taken, however.

Court Weighs County Fights

Decision on Albemarle and Henrico Questions Expected Soon.

Richmond, Jan. 17 (AP).—The Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals has taken under advisement the controversies in Henrico and Albemarle Counties relative to terms of officials who were not reelected when those counties voted for new forms of government last year.

The court heard attorneys on both sides yesterday, and then began consideration of arguments. It was regarded as probable a decision would be forthcoming before the end of the current term next week.

The central point at issue in both cases is the constitutionality of the law which puts out of office an official elected for a definite term before the term has expired.

In Albemarle, Treasurer Stuart Hamm is refusing to relinquish that office, and H. A. Haden, another county official, is asking the supreme court for a mandamus to compel him to do so. This case was brought straight to the highest tribunal.

Bradford Due to Qualify.

Richmond, Jan. 17 (AP).—Russell T. Bradford, of Nansemond, is expected to qualify Monday before Judge Luther B. Way, of Norfolk, as assistant to Sterling Hutcheson, United States District Attorney for the Eastern District of Virginia.

Quenstedt Hat In Maryland's Governor Race

Annapolis Mayor Will Be Candidate Under G.O.P. Banner.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 17 (AP).—Walter E. Quenstedt, thrice-elected mayor of normally Democratic Annapolis, today joined Harry W. Nice, Baltimore attorney, and former Representative John Philip Hill as candidates for the Republican nomination for Governor.

Asserting he possessed qualifications, Mayor Quenstedt last night said he would file papers with the secretary of state and announced his platform "as soon as the Frost is out of the ground."

Quenstedt said he would soon make his position clear on "public health, education, promotion of industry, labor and wages, public utilities, social reforms, public improvements, reduction of taxes and administrative reforms."

Although he declared he represented no group of the party, he left shortly after the announcement for La Plata, with Dr. J. Harry Schad, business manager of the young Republican League of Maryland, to address the Charles County branch of the league.

Quenstedt said he believes he has the qualifications of a standard-bearer "who possess youth, administrative experience, freedom from factional politics, an unblemished personal and official record, and sufficient support to finance his own campaign."

"By the very virtue of my being an average salaried man who is dependent upon his pay envelope for his livelihood," the Annapolis mayor declared, "I feel that I am better qualified to understand the problems of the people in this State to a better degree than the man who has never known what it is to hunt for a job or to make his weekly wages cover the needs of his family if he be fortunate enough to have a job."

Power Franchise Renewal Rejected

Charles Town, W. Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.).—Renewal of the North Virginia Power Co. franchise under its present terms has been refused by the city council.

Charter revision has been referred to a committee of City Attorney L. F. Bushong and Councilmen Link, Reineger and Weiner.

Opposition to the franchise was based chiefly against the long-term extension asked by the company.

James H. Middleton, 75, Father of Eight, Buried

Strasburg, Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.).—Funeral services were conducted from Mt. Carmel Methodist Church South, for James H. Middleton, 75, who died Sunday at the home of his son, Ben, near here. He was a native of Page County.

Surviving are eight children: John Middleton, of Orando; Frank and Ben Middleton, of Strasburg Junction; Mrs. Charley Middleton, Bethel; Walter Middleton, Oak Grove; Mrs. Pearl Pittington, Strasburg; Mrs. Sam Sager, Gettysburg, Pa., and Mrs. Henry Keller, Winchester.

Man Hurt in Wagon Fall.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.).—G. M. Miller, 42, former Pennsylvania Railroad station agent at Bunker Hill, this county, is in a critical condition from head injuries sustained when he was thrown to the ground from the top of a wagon load of fodder Monday.

Lewis Will Be Chief Speaker At School Meet

Virginia College Heads Also to Talk at Their 1934 Roanoke Session.

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.) President William Mather Lewis, of Lafayette College, will deliver the principal address before the annual meeting of the Association of Virginia Colleges, in Roanoke, February 9-10, Dean John L. Manahan, of the University of Virginia, has announced.

"The Times and the Colleges" will be the subject of Dr. Lewis' address, following the association dinner, February 9.

Prof. Robert H. Tucker, of Washington and Lee University, president of the Virginia Association of Colleges, will preside over the opening morning session, when the general topic will be "Newer Objectives in Higher Education."

After Dr. Tucker speaks, the University of Chicago plan will be analyzed by Dean Raymond B. Pinchbeck, of the University of Richmond. Other speakers on this program will be President H. C. G. Noffsinger, of Virginia Intermont College; President Charles J. Smith, of Roanoke College, and President M. L. Combs, of Fredericksburg State Teachers College. The discussion will be led by Dean W. T. Hodges, of the College of William and Mary.

Others to speak at the sessions include Prof. David C. Wilson, of Hampden-Sydney College, association vice president; President Theodore H. Jack, of Randolph-Macon Woman's College; Maj. Roy W. Wonson, of Staunton Military Academy; Prof. William R. Smithey, of the University of Virginia; Dr. Sydney B. Hall, State superintendent of public instruction; President Bessie C. Randolph, of Hollins College; Prof. Walter A. Frick, of Washington and Lee University; Col. Kenneth S. Purdie, of Virginia Military Institute; Prof. D. Maurice Allen, of Hampden-Sydney College; President Paul H. Bowman, of Bridgewater College; President Meta Glass, of Sweet Briar College; Dean John E. Williams, of Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

Charles Town to Seek $25,000 in PWA Funds

Corn-Hog Cut Plan Told in Jefferson

Series of Meetings Being Held in Towns.

Charles Town, W. Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.).—Adjustment of corn and corn-hog production is being discussed in a series of farm education meetings this week throughout Jefferson County under direction of B. Heath Holden, county agent.

Meetings will be held tomorrow, Friday and Saturday in Rippon, Summit Point, Halltown, Shepherdstown and Charles Town. Conferences were conducted earlier in the week at Middleway and Shenandoah Junction.

Information and instruction on this agricultural plan form the basis of the discussions.

Danville Asks Change.

Danville, Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.).—State Delegate Maitland H. Bustard will be asked by the City Council to introduce a bill in the General Assembly, amending this city's charter to permit borrowing up to $250,000 on temporary loans. The present limit set by the charter is $150,000.

Fredericksburg Fires Cost $1,753 Last Year

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 17 Spl.).—Fire damages of $1,753 here in 1933, is the estimate of George D. Smith, chief truckman, in his report to City Manager Levin J. Houston, jr.

The 112 alarms answered included five automobile fires, 58 chimney blazes, 36 miscellaneous conflagrations, and nine out-of-town calls. The total of alarms was the same as in 1932, which was the second highest number recorded here in eight years. The 136 alarms in 1930 set the record in that period.

Virginia Farmer Held In Wounding of Man

Luray, Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.).—Though he denies shooting Sam Lucas, who is in Harrisonburg Hospital with a head wound, Elby Turner, in jail here, will be given a hearing before Justice J. H. Booton soon.

Reports from Lucas Hollow, 12 miles south of Luray, say that Turner, a farmer, shot Lucas when he believed the latter was in the act of stealing a barrel of mash.

Cleaning House.

Although belated, and the result of newspaper publicity which ought not to have been necessary, President Roosevelt's public condemnation of "influence lawyers" at his press conference yesterday, will be applauded by all good citizens. The President made it imperative for Postmaster General Farley, as chairman of the Democratic National Committee, to follow through and enforce the letter as well as the spirit of the President's declaration.

What Mr. Roosevelt said, in effect, was that no one who holds high place in the party should seek to earn a living by creating the impression that he has access to the back door of the White House or great influence with administrators of Government departments.

Every Administration has camp followers; it is too much to expect of human nature that it will not want its spoils and rewards. But even those who have been most friendly to the Roosevelt Administration have viewed with misgivings the influx of highly-placed leaders of the President's party. They have realized that more administrations have been wrecked by greed within than by enemies without.

The Use Of Playgrounds.

New evidence of the anomalous situation in which our educational system has been placed is apparent in the lack of operating funds for two District play centers now under construction with CWA funds.

In comparison with some other communities the District is fortunate in the maintenance of educational standards. Yet the depression has sharply arrested the progress of our school system. In 1928 33.7 per cent of the District budget was devoted to education; in 1933 that percentage had dropped to 29.3. During the same years the percentage of the budget devoted to recreational activities fell from 8.2 to 6.4. Public welfare, including emergency relief, required only 12.8 per cent of the budget in 1928, but took 18.7 per cent in 1933. Most of the other activities of the local government maintained their respective positions in the scale of expenditures. So it is apparent that educational activities are bearing the brunt of budgetary curtailment in Washington.

Playgrounds have come to be regarded as an essential part of the educational system. The manner in which boys and girls spend their leisure time, especially during the summer vacation when they are not occupied by school work, has an influence upon their characters no less important than that of supervised studies. Recreation centers are a modern device for preventing delinquency and mitigating criminal tendencies. They can not be regarded as one of the frills of the educational system, eradicable with no adverse results. And it would be a strange gesture toward economy if the play centers which are being developed by the CWA as socially desirable and necessary projects should be left disused for want of a small appropriation to keep them in operation.

Some communities are compelled by bankruptcy to neglect their schools and playgrounds. But there is no excuse for such retrogression in Washington, where there is no municipal debt and a substantial budget surplus in prospect for next year.

Deeds, Not Words.

Back in 1926, Charles W. Deeds, now 31 years old, bought 200 shares of Pratt-Whitney Aircraft Co. stock for $40. Two years later, he got a stock dividend of 16,000 shares. The Pratt-Whitney corporation was absorbed by United Aircraft & Transport Corporation and Deeds' stock was worth $3,367,000 at the time of the transfer. At the height of the boom, his investment had been pyramided into a paper value of $5,624,000. Since 1926, Deeds has received, on his original investment, bonuses of $151,176; salaries of $142,613 and director's fees of $4,380. His present stock holding is valued at $500,000, which isn't bad by depression standards.

Mr. Deeds attributes his success to the fact that he was "educated for business administration." But it may be significant that United Aircraft holds the mail contract for the Northern transcontinental route and that it gets approximately 42 per cent of the amount the Government pays in subsidy; and Mr. Deeds' financial success, rivaling that of Wallingford, may not be entirely unrelated to the fact that between 1926 and 1933, when his fortune was skyrocketing, commercial operators received $87,500,000 from the Government in subsidies and the public was investing millions in the stocks of air companies with mail contracts.

C. E. Woolman, of Monroe, La., another witness, was unfortunate enough to put his money on the wrong horse. He organized and operated an air mail service on part of the route which is now the Southern transcontinental airway. He admits that he almost haunted Washington in 1930 trying to obtain a contract for the entire Southern route. He was not even permitted to bid. But, he testified, his balm was an offer from the successful company, a member of the "trust," to buy him out for "50 cents on the dollar or nothing."

Apparently, Mr. Woolman never had a business education. Perhaps that is why he lacked Mr. Deeds' uncanny ability to back the right horse.

King And Parliament.

To every student of constitutional history the Puritan Revolution of the seventeenth century, which cost King Charles I his head and gave the principle of responsible parliamentary government to the world, will always remain a period of unexampled political significance. Three centuries after those stirring events we are apt to forget that many of the lessons then bitterly learnt are still applicable. Of those lessons perhaps the most significant was the absolute refusal of the Parliament to permit dictatorial control of financial policy by the executive.

This issue was first posed in 1626, 16 years prior to the outbreak of the civil war. When his second Parliament met, Charles, finding his financial necessities pressing, issued a royal edict for the levy of tonnage and poundage by prerogative, following which he proceeded to impose a forced loan. The quaint language and sedulously optimistic spirit of the latter proclamation are worth quoting today:

> And these sums we are confident will readily and cheerfully be lent unto us by our loving subjects, when they shall be truly informed from us of what importance and of what necessity that is which we now require of them, and when they shall be assured by us, which we faithfully promise and undertake on the royal word of a king (which we will be jealous not to break with our people), that not a penny of those monies which thus we borrow of them shall be bestowed or expended but upon those public and general services only, wherein every one of them and the whole body of the kingdom, their wives, children and posterity, have their personal and common interest.

Fortunately for the development of constitutional government, the House of Commons, in which there were fortunately few weaklings, refused to accept the king's assurances at face value. His mere assertion that novel financial procedure was "sound," they realized, did not thereby make it sound. Five members of the Commons refused to pay the loan and were imprisoned. From then on events marched steadily to the historic Petition of Right. For three centuries Anglo-Saxon parliamentary practice has been based on its affirmation "that no man hereafter be compelled to make or yield any gift, loan, benevolence, tax, or such like charge, without common consent by act of Parliament."

It is, as President Roosevelt said in his message to Congress preceding the gold reserve bill, "a prerogative of Government to determine from time to time the extent and nature of the metallic reserve." But it is no less a prerogative of the legislative arm of government to insure, by the fullest inquiry and examination, that the Executive shall clearly, unequivocally and publicly state its objectives, and stand criticism thereon, in raising revenues by manipulation of the currency or in any other way.

To establish this principle as permanent, our English forefathers fought a civil war. That England has had domestic tranquillity ever since is in no small measure due to the fact that the executive has never since raised the issue. If it should feel compelled to do so there is no doubt that the fullest parliamentary inquiry would as a matter of course precede passage of such momentous legislation.

How To Get Warships.

But for the good sense of the police of Kearny, N. J., and Department of Justice operatives, the detention Monday afternoon of five Japanese might have become an "international incident" of the sort which jingoes in all countries love.

When they saw five foreigners taking pictures on the Jersey meadows CWA workmen became suspicious and reported to the police. Investigation disclosed that the group were Japanese government engineers, in this country to study railroad operations, and that they were indulging the penchant for photography which Japanese share with Germans and a good many Americans.

The incident, however, may be useful to Admiral Nobumasa Suetsugu, commander in chief of the Japanese navy, who recently has been directing an intensive campaign of propaganda against the United States in the lurid section of the Japanese press. A cable to the Chicago Tribune attributes the recent outbreak to the care with which Katsuji Debuchi, former Ambassador to the United States, and other responsible diplomats have eliminated the apprehension of American belligerency from the minds of the Japanese people. Military budgets are under consideration in the Diet next week. There is no question that they will pass, but according to the cable, "the military objective now is one of keeping the public from feeling that the national coffers are being cleaned out by the military clique without sufficient cause."

Admiral Suetsugu has been saying that our navy is a "menace to the world" and that "if America had no such big navy, how happy the world would be." It is not a good answer that Secretary Swanson should be saying, in a magazine article which appeared simultaneously with the admiral's, that our "weak naval position" does not help the cause of world peace, since "undue weakness has always tended to invite aggression and to encourage foreign powers to interfere with national interest."

Both countries need more Debuchis, more men of good will and good sense, and fewer jingo newspapers, admirals and officials clamoring for a naval race like that in which Germany and Great Britain indulged prior to 1914.

Sugar And Cuban Chaos.

Surrounded by uncertainty, Carlos Hevia, the fifth President of Cuba during the past six months, is now commencing the almost impossible task of bringing order out of the chaos in that distracted republic. It is of the greatest significance that the latest Cuban President is an agriculturist, thoroughly familiar with the sugar problem in the island. For sugar is the economic basis of Cuba's political difficulties and without recovery in the sugar market, orderly government by our Caribbean neighbor can scarcely be expected.

Eighty per cent of Cuba's national income and governmental revenues depend upon sugar. Its diminishing production, and continued low price, illustrate the problem which has got to be solved. Five years ago the Cuban sugar crop was close to 6,000,000 tons, the great majority of which was profitably exported. Last year estimated production fell to 1,300,000 tons and the decline is continuing at a rapid pace. In the meantime, prices have dropped from the phenomenal high of 19½ cents a pound in May, 1920, to ½ cent a pound early last year. There has been a slight recovery, but raw sugar sells today at little over 3 cents a pound.

Military intervention, as the Administration thoroughly realizes, could in itself work no rectification of this economic catastrophe. The only substantial way in which the United States can assist restoration of Cuban stability is by an arrangement which will insure the planters a certain market in this country. To the securing of such an arrangement both the Department of Agriculture and the Department of State have long been bending their energies.

Present plans, embodied in the Costigan bill before the Senate Agricultural Committee, involve the classification of sugar as "a basic commodity" under the definition of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. This plan would permit curtailment of American sugar production under the familiar processing tax procedure. With this curtailment it would be possible to allot Cuba a definite import quota in the neighborhood of the 1,700,000 tons which was foreshadowed as her share under the scheme which failed to go through last fall. The Costigan bill is not the only means by which the United States can assist in saving Cuba from complete economic collapse. But it is a scheme on which much thought has been expended.

The responsibility of the United States in this matter is by no means merely that of a friendly neighbor. Under the Reciprocity Treaty and the Platt Amendment we encouraged the investment of a huge amount of American capital in the Cuban sugar industry, and thereby the stimulus of that industry far beyond the domestic needs of the island. Without constructive assistance on the re-ordering of Cuba's economic life it is worse than idle to expect the restoration of political order.

Up To The Filipinos.

A new chapter in the struggle for independence of the Philippine Islands opens today. The Hawes-Cutting act is now a dead letter, having been emphatically repudiated by the Philippine Legislature. Many idealists in the islands who are ready to accept "independence at any price" are doubtless disappointed, but the dominant leaders at Manila have clearly manifested their preference for the status quo so long as the alternative is the type of independence prescribed in the contingent law passed just a year ago.

Although this measure was unsatisfactory from many viewpoints, it has nevertheless served a useful purpose. For many years the "politicos" at Manila have been demanding immediate, complete and absolute independence. Volumes of oratory have sprung from that thesis. Yet when Congress prescribed a definite method by which the Filipinos could obtain a divorce from Uncle Sam within about ten years, it was flatly rejected.

The Philippine Legislature sent a mission to Washington to seek modification of the Hawes-Cutting act. But that measure was allowed to die without even an announcement from the delegates as to what their program is. Apparently they decided that the chances for favorable action on their proposal would be better if an entirely new start could be made. Congress will doubtless decide to take up the issue again if the report, which is said to have been submitted to President Roosevelt, offers constructive and reasonable suggestions. But the time for bluffing on this issue has definitely passed.

Hence These Tears!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There was great prosperity in Egypt. The people were stepping high, wide and handsome. But Pharaoh was worried; he could not sleep of nights. The night was filled with dreams of fat and lean kine. As men sometimes do, he talked it over with his butler. And the butler said: "Your majesty, you had me in jail a while back and there I met a young Hebrew. He had formerly been general manager for J. Purpont Potiphar, who, as you know, is a great dreamer of dreams, and he became an adept in interpreting dreams. But Mrs. Potiphar had framed him and that is what led him to jail. While I was there I told him my troubles and he gave me some very good advice. Now, your majesty, if you are worried about conditions you had better send for this man Joseph."

The Pharaoh sent for Joseph and told him his troubles and Joseph gave him advice as follows: "Your majesty, you have seven lean years ahead of you; you had better stop building pyramids and palatial offices and hotels and marble bridges across the Potomac (I mean the Nile) and start saving for your seven lean years. It is going to be difficult to collect taxes from an impoverished people, and you had better lay up a surplus against the hard times that are surely ahead of us."

This particular Pharaoh followed Joseph's advice and Joseph became the greatest secretary of the treasury before Alexander Hamilton and with the help of Pharaoh founded the First National Bank of Egypt.

Since then we have had Pharaohs who knew not Joseph, they have rejected the prudent advice of Joseph and followed the advice of the greatest Secretary of the Treasury since Alexander Hamilton, who told us to get rich by spending. The pagens were in the saddle.

Came another Pharaoh who inherits the burden of debt, the natural result of attempting to get rich by spending. Unless this debt can be gotten rid of, the experiment of getting rich by spending must cease. This pharaoh is no Puritan. To pay the debt in the orthodox way would mean to work and save for two generations, and this does not appeal to him. Being of respectable parentage, he dislikes the idea of respectable bankruptcy (the year of jubilee which Moses initiated, thereby making a virtue of necessity) and toys with the idea of clipping the coin, forgetting the injunction, "Thou shalt not have diverse weights and measures."

Hunc, haec lachrymae!

DR. S. P. KNIGHT.

Complaining of Racial Injustice.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wonder if you realize the great injustice done the Negro, when in almost every case of some heinious crime, even before all the evidence is gathered, the police authorities pick up the nearest colored person to the crime, and the press of the country immediately blares a large headline to the world that a Negro suspect is held for the crime. This at once stirs the mob into action, and even after a man has been set free by a jury he is taken and lynched.

Is this a deliberate attempt on the part of the press to keep alive that damnable flame, hatred, the greatest curse of the white race, that has burned in their hearts lo these hundreds of years and has seared and scorched every vestige of justice and honesty and truth that ever dwelt in their souls? And with all of this, the ministers of the gospel, supposed to be the ministers of the God of Love, have not raised voice against this great evil. When we read their learned ecclesiastical prayers to an all-wise God of Love, and justice to every creature, we can understand why their churches are nothing more than style centers.

Instead of using the newspapers to preach God's message of justice to the oppressed, and speaking out against the flagrant acts of injustice that are practiced every day before their eyes, they are trying to tell the lawmaker how to bring back peace and prosperity by smearing over the surface the whitewash of hypocrisy, while underneath is seething with venom of graft, hate, dishonesty and injustice.

CHARLES A. ROGERS.

Asiatic Aggression by Japan.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Allow me to commend your attitude on the Japanese menace to the United States of America. The Japanese policy in seeking domination in China is the preliminary step in a program to organize Asiatic races for war against your country.

May I say that American assistance in bringing about a strong, patriotic new China's people's government in China, friendly to your people and Government, with a well-organized military force, would be a constant check on Japanese aggression in Asia, as well as the best possible insurance against war between your country and Japan.

JOSEPH CHIANG,
Chinese Press Representative.
Foochow, China.

(Ed. Note—Mr. Chiang evidently read into an editorial something that was not intended to be there. We have made no reference to a "Japanese menace" to the United States.)

Pension Law Administration.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Pension laws for veterans disabled in war service are beautifully worded and are couched in phrases that surpass our educated Chinese friends who are noted for their flowery expressions. Unfortunately, the laws are carried out like the love Judas showed to Our Savior.

Allow me to explain the above and bear in mind every statement can be proved to any one interested.

In April, 1933, each Spanish War and Philippine War veteran received a notice from the Veterans' Administration that he should send immediately to the Veterans' Administration any evidence tending to show that his disability resulted from war service.

In many instances that order was impossible to fulfill, for it meant seeking witnesses and doctors of 35 years ago, many of whom are where the veteran of 1898 and 1900 wishes to be.

On the so-called review of Spanish War and Philippine veterans was a doctor who stated the impression he got from his instructions was "he was to save money for the Government."

The majority of the veterans of the Spanish War believe the laws for service-connected disabilities are just, if enforced.

Give the man disabled in war a square deal. The Bible says there will always be wars, and your son, anyone's son will be called—perhaps to return a cripple, requesting not charity, but the same thing he gave so freely and patriotically to his country—help. HARKIE.

Baltimore, Md.

Attention, Mr. Bruner.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The articles that have appeared in your paper about the "Washington Alleys" are well written, but why waste a clever man's time writing about our "alleys" when our "streets" are the biggest mess in all America, and quite a joke all over the country?

If your splendid newspaper wants to do some real good, you should have that same man write a few articles about our streets and the thousands of cars parked all over them. It is the worst mess that I have ever seen in any city in America. There should be a limited parking time for all cars so that each and every fellow could park for one or two hours at a certain place.

I think the alleys of Washington are wonderful in comparison to the streets with the thousands and thousands of old cars parked on each side. I never saw a city that was run so poorly as this city and such lax parking rules. I hope you will have this same man write on the streets of Washington.

A. D. DALLING.

The Post's Article on Russia.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to extend to you my deep appreciation of the article appearing in The Washington Post setting forth so clearly the Russian situation. The sympathy and understanding of the Russian question—past, present and future—by those whose opinions carry weight with the American public, is a dire need at this time.

ALEXANDER J. ELSHIN,
President, Lieut. Gen., Russian Imperial Army.

If One Tree Bears Fruit, Why Doubt That the Orchard Will?

By Robert Quillen

Scientists and philosophers seem to agree that the history of our racial development is repeated in the development of the individual.

Man alone must learn to walk. Though other creatures take their first step as they do their last, he gets about on hands and knees until parental training makes him a biped.

He must learn the art of speech. He is wholly selfish, with no thought except for himself. His temper is unrestrained and opposition or restraint enrages him.

He takes what he wants, without regard for property rights. He is content in the dirt. He attempts to eat anything he can get in his mouth.

By the time he can stand erect he has the beginning of a conscience and knows right from wrong. He learns not to steal and has some respect for property rights.

He must learn ethics and honor as he learns arithmetic, and discretion teaches him sportsmanship.

Step by step he develops as the race did, and in the mature prime of life—assuming that his body and mind have developed normally—he is a civilized, just, reasonable and well-mannered creature with due respect for the rights of others and some capacity for unselfishness.

He is, in short, a fair example of the human race in its present state of development.

If that is true, is it not reasonable to suppose that further changes, which occur after maturity and reveal old age at its best, presage and prophesy the kind of creature our man will be when his present capacities are fully developed?

Age is patient, free of lusts and rages, temperate, gentle in manner. It has learned how short life is. It realizes that few things are as important as they once seemed. Gain no longer seems the chief end of man. Boasting and showing off seem silly. The things that seem to matter are uprightness, pity, a clean heart, wisdom, peace.

If man grown old can realize that greed and selfishness and lust and combat are foolish and evil things, why doubt that the race grown old will be as wise and as decent?

Along the Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

THE Administration, pendulum-like as it is in the matter of the Leftists and Rightists, has swung back to the left. It is necessary to record these swingings as they occur in order that scores may be chalked up for one side or the other. Then when we come out of this melee the one having the most scores will be determined the winner.

BARGERON.

The victory for the Leftists in this instance comes in the Administration's action against the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey to make it stop giving baseball mitts and gloves to boys and also to make it stop paying Babe Ruth for telling them how to play baseball. There is a suspicion that the Standard Oil Co. is doing this just to promote its products, and this is considered to be unfair to the smaller oil companies which have no baseball mitts and gloves and no Babe Ruths.

• • • •

Fortune favored the Leftists in this instance in that the administrator of the oil code is "Honest Harold" Ickes, whom they consider one of them. Had it been a Rightist administrator in the saddle, such as Crack-Down Johnson, it is likely the matter would have had to go to the arbitration of Mr. Roosevelt. As it is, though, it is a clean-cut victory for the Leftists.

Mr. Ickes says in very forthright and unequivocal terms that he understands the oil code to apply to the big fellows as well as the little ones. Now the little ones haven't got baseball mitts and gloves and Babe Ruths, so the Standard will not be permitted to have them. Oh, well, it can have them for its own employes presumably, but it can't be permitted to be giving them away in a manner that might suggest to the parents of the boys, or the boys themselves, that they buy their gas from Standard filling stations.

And it is believed that the Leftists have won a victory of far more importance than is shown on the face. It is believed, assuming they are upheld by the courts, that they have driven an entering wedge against the high salaries of such people as Babe Ruth, who are not thinkers at all but who only get these high salaries because of the appalling injustice of our social scheme.

It is an indirect way of going after Babe, but it would seem that he is reached nevertheless. If the Standard is required to desist so that the smaller companies can sell oil and gas just as well as this big company, it would seem to follow that in addition to getting rid of its baseball mitts and gloves it would also get rid of Babe. The company has engaged him to instruct the youngsters in the fine art of the game.

• • • •

Now Babe has just signed another contract with the Yankees for $35,000 a year. This is much more than any of the thinkers get, not counting their income from their syndicated articles, lectures and books which in their thinking against the high salaries of others, they don't count. Mr. Roosevelt himself, has not said anything about Babe's salary but he has expressed himself feelingly on the high salaries of movie actresses and actors so presumably the Babe's salary gives him no appetite.

The purpose of the Leftists, indeed, is to place the salary emphasis on the thinkers instead of the nonthinkers as it has been in this country. This is what is meant when it is said that in the future the profit motive in business must be subordinated to the service motive. Apparently in the case of the Standard Oil the Leftists see a sinister motive which, although it checks the profit motive in this instance, can not be considered a service motive.

I suppose it is needless to point out that in placing the salary emphasis on the thinkers the measure is not to be what the thinkers think. Suffice it to suggest that they are thinking, for one thing, about those who get higher salaries than they do.

Literary Cats.

Many writers have been fond of cats; the cat is silent, graceful, thoughtful and can always entertain itself. Its one and only interference with the art of composition consists in its failure to appreciate the importance of what is being done with pen, ink and paper. It quite naturally imagines that the pen is meant as a means of feline entertainment. George Moore told me that his cat would leap on to the desk, take a firm hold of the penholder with its mouth, and remove it from his hand.

In the opening chapters of "The Crime of Sylvestre Bonnard," by Anatole France, there is a fine cat named Hamilcar. In four novels of Balzac there is a famous cat. There is a remarkable cat in Dicken's "Bleak House," also in "Dombey and Son."

Thomas Gray, author of the "Elegy," wrote a funeral poem about the tabby cat of his friend, Horace Walpole, which had been drowned in the vain attempt to seize a goldfish in a bowl. The late Augustine Birrell was photographed with his cat; and the English novelist, Sheila Kaye-Smith, has today what is probably the most gorgeous cat in Great Britain.

Dr. Wynekoop Sinks as Net Is Tightened

Her Death Is Imminent as State Tells of Insurance Deals.

her eyes, buried her head in her hands, or gazed morosely at the operating table, bundles of bloody garments, a wall chart of the Wynekoop home, a .32 caliber pistol and other State evidence.

Attorney Smith said the defendant was determined to last out the trial.

Doctors Order Quiet.

Physicians have ordered Dr. Alice to remain as quiet as possible. She goes to and from the courtroom to the nearby county jail by wheelchair, is lifted from the chair to her seat in court, and to her bed in the jail infirmary. Frequently administration of digitalis is resorted to in order to keep her heart action as near normal as possible.

Her pulse reached 100 during the day, Dr. Catherine said, after being about 80 in the morning. Usually, Catherine said, it is about 72 to 76.

Miss McCormick recited in a calm tone that Dr. Wynkoop telephoned her on Sunday, October 23, to write a policy on Rheta, and said she went next day to the Wynekoop home on Monroe street.

Q. (by Prosecutor Charles S. Dougherty). Who was present when you talked at the home about issuing the policy? A. (by Miss McCormick). Dr. Alice Wynekoop.

Q. Did you talk to Rheta Gardner Wynekoop at any time about the policy?

A. No, sir.

Q. When had you seen the defendant prior to October 26?

A. About a month earlier I went to her home and suggested she pay a premium due on a policy for Dr. Catherine by making a loan on her policy. She later did so.

Dealt With Dr. Alice.

Q. Did Dr. Wynekoop discuss her financial condition at that time?

A. No, sir.

Q. Of whom did you ask the customary questions for the information needed in the application?

A. Dr. Wynekoop.

Q. Where did Rheta sign the application?

A. In an upstairs room. Dr. Alice took it to her there.

Defense attorneys brought out on cross-examination that Dr. Alice had followed the same procedure in obtaining policies on Catherine's life.

Police Lieut. Thomas Duffy, promoted to acting captain for his detective work on the Wynekoop mystery, told from the witness stand of questioning Dr. Alice on the night of the homicide, and typewritten copies of questions and answers in the interrogation were introduced in evidence.

Denied Knowledge of Death.

He said Dr. Wynekoop told him she knew nothing of Rheta's death before coming upon the body on an operating table in a basement surgical room of her home about 8:30 p. m.

Subsequently Dr. Alice signed a statement that she shot Rheta after the girl had died from an overdose of chloroform, but that statement was later retracted.

Ahern, dressed in the dark garb of his profession, testified that when he arrived at the house at about 10 p. m., Dr. Wynekoop told him she had not notified police of the tragedy "because I don't want any publicity."

He said rigor mortis had set in the body when he was called, adding that bodily heat usually leaves a body within three to six hours after death.

Policemen Walter Kelly and Arthur March told of finding Rheta's body, and both were questioned closely about the amount of blood near the body and concerning whether there was chloroform in a bottle found in the death room.

Stories Conflict.

Kelly said there was "a small amount of liquid, presumably chloroform, in the bottle." Then he was confronted with his testimony at the coroner's inquest that the bottle was empty and gave off no odor.

Defense attorneys made much of that discrepancy, and also brought out that Dr. Alice and Rheta apparently were friendly a few hours before the younger woman's death.

Q. (By Smith). Did Dr. Alice Wynekoop tell you her last words to Rheta?

A. (By Kelly). Yes; she told me her last remark to Rheta was, "Why don't you go for a walk? It's such a nice day and the air might do you good."

Q. (By Dougherty). Did the defendant say she had seen Earle (the slain girl's husband) November 12?

A. Yes.

Q. Did she mention seeing him November19?.

A. No. (Subsequently it was brought out that Dr. Alice and Earle talked for two hours in an automobile on a side street far from the Wynekoop home on November 19).

Byrd Near Old Camp At Little America

Aboard Admiral Byrd's Flagship at Sea, en route to Little America, via Mackay Radio, Jan. 18 (AP) (delayed).—The Byrd Antartic expedition neared Little America today. At 4 p. m. the flagship was 150 miles north of her goal.

The crew has made ready all equipment of the expedition for a speedy transfer from the ship to the old Byrd camp at Little America, which has been unoccupied four years.

Dry Test Case To Decide Fate Of 13,000 Cases

Canon Chase and Morrison Are Attracted by Issue to Supreme Court.

The fate of 13,000 prohibition law violators hung in the balance yesterday as the Supreme Court heard arguments on a test case which will decide whether repeal of the eighteenth amendment means anything to them or not.

They compose the vast army whose roster is to be found on the unfinished cases pending in the crowded Federal court dockets of the country. They were arrested or indicted under the Volstead act before repeal and have not yet come to trial.

Courts in all parts of the country have tried to decide their case. One judge in North Carolina ruled December 6 that the Volstead act was dead and the Federal courts had no power to hear cases under it. He held that Byrum Gibson and Claude Chambers, charged with dry law conspiracy, were free men, thereby furnishing the test case.

Legal Score 4 to 3.

Three Federal courts have ruled in accordance with the North Carolina jurist. Three others have ruled the alleged violators still may be prosecuted. That leaves the score 4 to 3 in favor of the bootlegger.

Though the case is of pure academic interest to the Government, debate of the once vital issue has attracted to the courtroom many who are or once were connected with the prohibition cause.

In a remote bench Canon William Sheafe Chase, head of the International Reform League, watched proceedings. It is his contention that the eighteenth amendment never has been repealed. He sought to raise this question, but lawyers for alleged violaters blocked the move.

Morrison Also There.

Watching also on a front bench was Norman J. Morrison, who narrowly missed fame when, as former chief assistant to Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, he prosecuted Texas Guinan and Helen Morgan as conspirators.

Morrison, sent to New York to prosecute the night club entertainers after prohibition agents had spent thousands of dollars buying champagnes and orchids in a round of whoopee-making and evidence-gathering, was unable to convince New York jurors of the entertainers' guilt. He left the city, doubting that prohibition could be enforced.

Peery Inaugurated; Pleads For School Fund, Tax Reform

dress, Gov. Peery stressed the importance of maintaining an 8-month school term. He approved a recent recommendation of his predecessor for an increase of $1,000,000 in school funds and suggested appropriation of an additional $1,000,000 to wipe out a 30 per cent reduction in educational funds provided for the present fiscal year. That would mean a school budget of $7,010,425 annually.

In place of the present automobile license rate of 70 cents per 100 pounds, Gov. Peery proposed a flat scale of $10 for cars weighing up to 3,000 pounds—or about 70 per cent of machines in the State—$15 for cars between 3,000 and 4,000 pounds, $25 for automobiles between 4,000 and 5,000 pounds, and $35 for cars weighing more than 5,000 pounds.

Cites Liquor Estimates.

Gov. Peery concurred in a recommendation of the retiring governor for additional taxes of $500,000 a year on public utility corporation revenues. He cited a Pollard estimate that prospective liquor revenue would total $1,650,000 a year.

All possible support, Gov. Peery said, should be given to farm relief measures of the Roosevelt Administration.

There was widespread interest in Peery's proposals to create new income. One suggestion was to tighten State income tax laws, estimated to produce $422,000 a year.

Would Cut Exemptions.

The plan involved reduction of exemptions from $1,250 to $1,000 for single persons and from $2,800 to $2,000 for married persons. Exemptions for each dependent would be cut from $400 to $200. Deductions by individuals for dividends received from corporations would be discontinued.

About $300,000 a year, Peery estimated, could be raised by readjusting the merchants' license tax. A detailed list of proposed increases in such levies was advanced.

Other new revenue sources suggested were:

A tax of 3 per cent on miscellaneous receipts of power, light, heat and water companies, to yield $85,000.

Taxation of gross receipts of street railway companies operating buses in cities at a rate of 1.6 per cent, $30,000.

Imposition of a "reasonable" mileage tax on gas pipe lines, $24,000.

An increase of from $2.25 to $20 a mile in the tax on poles and conduits of telephon companies, $18,000.

A new admissions tax of 5 per cent on motion picture theaters, $150,000.

Supports Dispensary Plan.

The Governor announced his support of the State-operated dispensary plan, approved by a majority of the Liquor Control Commission. He explained he was against suggested licensing systems because; "private profit in a business of this character should be eliminated."

Peery warned against any change in the commission's recommendation for a three-man whisky governing board. He stipulated, however, that the chairman should be vested with exclusive authority in appointment and control of employes.

Amendment of the majority liquor plan to permit immediate local option elections on petition of 25 per cent of the qualified voters was urged by the Governor.

A fund of $2,000,000 — exactly double existing outlays—was asked for improvement of gaps between completed roads, irrespective of highway districts.

Fluctuating conditions, Peery reported, make it advisable to authorize the State Corporation Commission to alter public utility rates whenever deemed necessary. He added:

"I further recommend the enactment of a law requiring utility companies chartered and operating in Virginia to file with the State Corporation Commission full information with respect to proposed issues of stocks or bonds, and to obtain before issue the approval of the commission. In this way the investing public may be afforded some protection from securities that are not supported by adequate values or that are not soundly financed."

Would Rearrange Judiciary.

Consolidation or rearrangement of judicial districts, Peery declared, would bring substantial economy.

Approving county reform movements, he said:

"The splendid service of a commission on county government resulted in the passage of a law by which the people of a county, by direct vote, may adopt the county manager or county executive form of government. Some of the counties have already adopted one of the new plans provided for.

"The change is generally proving satisfactory. The result gives greater efficiency and economy in the local government. Similar action on the part of other counties is recommended. The continuance of this commission seems advisable."

Commonwealth's attorneys, city commissioners of revenue and city treasurers, the governor said, should receive salaries instead of fees. He insisted, however, that sheriffs, city sergeants and court clerks continue to receive fees.

Would Liquidate Closed Banks.

Liquidation of insolvent banks and insurance companies was proposed. The governor also suggested substitution of trial judges for justices of the peace.

Referring to the life sentence recently imposed on George Crawford, Negro, in Leesburg for the slaying of two white women, Peery commented:

"Respect for law is traditional with Virginians. It is part of our inheritance. The record of the State is a matter of pride.

"The trial recently held in one of the courts of Virginia of a person who had been temporarily withheld from Virginia justice on the false assumption that he would not receive a fair trial, affords reassurance to the people of every section that Virginia steadfastly adheres to her traditional stand for law and order.

"Law underlies the foundation of society. Failure to enforce the law undermines the law itself and leaves us without security. Mob law will not be countenanced or condoned by the right-thinking people of Virginia. Justice should be administered with promptness. We need to get rid of outworn laws."

G. C. Ames, 67, Once Business Leader, Dead

Heart Attack in Hotel Here Fatal to Former Head of Foundry.

George C. Ames, 67, former president of the American Brake Shoe & Foundry Co., of New York, died yesterday of a heart attack in his apartment at the Shoreham Hotel. His body was found by a maid.

A former resident of Englewood, N. J., Mr. Ames moved here two years ago, when he retired from active business. He had been one of the prominent industrialists of the East.

He was a widower, and lived alone. He became ill last night, but his condition was not thought serious. He was pronounced dead by Dr. Harry Kauffman, house physician at the Shoreham.

One sister, Miss Anne Seymour Ames, of Washington, survives.

Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Pneumonia Perils Brain Operation

Baby Stricken in Baltimore Hospital.

Baltimore, Jan. 17 (AP).—Billy Koecher, 6-month-old Racine, Wis., baby upon whom Dr. Walter E. Dandy performed an intricate brain operation ten days ago, today developed pneumonia.

"He is very ill," it was said at Johns Hopkins Hospital.

The baby came to Dr. Dandy with an advanced case of hydrocephalus, or water on the brain.

Dr. Dandy's frequent brain operations for hydrocephalus recently attracted new attention when Sue Trammel, Houston, Tex., baby, was flown here for an operation.

No Takers

Couldn't Turn in His $20 Gold Piece.

(Associated Press.)

"I was just keeping it as a souvenir."

So a man, rather shabbily dressed, told a guard at the Treasury yesterday, displaying a $20 gold piece.

When he went to the bank to turn it in under Government orders, he found the bank, under local clearing house orders, had stopped taking gold at 1 o'clock.

At the Treasury, he found the cash room had closed at 2 o'clock, so even the Treasury was without machinery for taking the gold.

Treasury officials hurriedly conferred. The results was a probable permission for those who honestly tried to turn in gold yesterday to have a little longer chance to do so. An order to this effect is expected.

Cloud Receives Trophy Today

Roosevelt Will Give Schiff Safety Award to Marines.

(Associated Press.)

In the presence of Navy and Marine Corps highest ranking officers, President Roosevelt wil present today the Herbert Schiff Memorial Flying Trophy to First Lieut. David L. Cloud, jr., of Crawfordville, Ga.

Lieut. Cloud will be awarded the trophy as commanding officer of Marine Observation Squadron VO-7M, credited with having the most successful year of any squadron in Navy or Marine aviation in flying hours, without accident to personnel or materiel.

The family of the late Herbert Schiff, a Naval Reserve aviator, killed on active duty in 1924, award the trophy annually to Navy or Marine aviators credited with the best flying record.

Classes to Start In Firefighting At Hyattsville

Jobless Transients Given Shelter in Old Town Jail.

The first of a series of classes in firefighting and the use of fire equipment will be held tonight at the Hyattsville Volunteer Fire Department headquarters.

Assistant Chief E. A. Davis and Capt. Harry Wilcoxen will instruct the classes. Both are graduates of the District Fireman's School. An invitation has been extended to all firemen of Prince Georges County to attend.

The Hyattsville firemen have also been assisting the county welfare board in registering jobless transients who are given overnight quarters in the old town jail.

The jail, a room adjoining the fire department headquarters, was abandoned soon after a lockup was established in the county offices building.

Recently the cells were taken over by the welfare board. At first there was some objection to placing wanderers in "jail," and the town was asked to remove the bars. Muncipial officials and the welfare board, however, later compromised when the town erected a wooden door.

Locking this door every night was suggested in case the room housed men who might later turn out to be criminals. It was felt that an opportunity would be given any one planning a crime to have the alibi that they spent the night at the transient's room. This plan, however, was vetoed.

Frank B. Smith Urged For Park Commission

Recommendations yesterday were sent to Gov. Ritchie of Maryland indorsing Frank B. Smith, of Mount Rainier, as a member of the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

If approved, Mr. Smith, long an outstanding political figure of Prince Georges County, will fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of George N. Palmer, now a member of the county board of commissions.

A CAUTION IN COAL BUYING

The HOOK

Calling a Bargain Coal "Hard Coal" is the Hook ... DON'T NIBBLE

DON'T be hooked by the words "hard coal" in ads that feature "bargain" or special price. "Hard Coal" has meant Pennsylvania Anthracite to the public since the year 1820, when this long-burning fuel was first mined. Coal offered under misleading names, with a price hook angling for your dollar, frequently is not the real Pennsylvania Anthracite.

Be warned: Pennsylvania Anthracite is a superior fuel, which every good dealer will name in his advertising if he means you to get real hard coal. When you buy coal make sure that you really get what you think you are getting.

Miss Simpson Becomes Bride Of Dr. M'Carthy

Nuptial Mass Held After Wedding Rites at Sacred Heart.

The marriage of Miss Helen Marie Simpson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Aubrey Simpson, to Dr. Stephen Alexander McCarthy, which took place yesterday morning at 9 o'clock in the Shrine of the Sacred Heart, was followed by a nuptial mass, performed by the pastor, the Right Rev. P. C. Gavan. The tall, dark green palms were an effective background for the lighted altar and the six gold standards which were filled with great clusters of yellow snapdragons, chrysanthemums and calla lilies, which was flanked on either side by tall candelabra.

The bride, who was escorted by her father, wore a gown of ivory satin. Rare old lace formed the top of the bodice and tiny puffs on the long tight-fitting sleeves of satin. Her ivory tulle veil which fell in graceful folds to the end of her court train was held in place by a coronet of lace, and she carried a sheaf of calla lilies.

Miss Mary McCarthy, sister of the bridegroom, was the maid of honor, and wore a gown of gold-colored satin; fashioned on long slim lines with a short train. The bodice had a V neck and capelet sleeves. Her hat of matching satin was trimmed with brown fagoting and a halo brim of brown horsehair, and she carried a large arm bouquet of Talisman roses.

Bridesmaids in Green Satin.

The bridesmaids were Miss Elizabeth Degnan, Miss Margaret Gwinn, Miss Ann Finegan, Miss Virginia Keknes, Miss Alice Tippett and Mrs. James Nathaniel Blackstone, who wore charming gowns of wood-green satin modeled on lines similar to the gown of the maid of honor, and their hats of green satin had halo brims of horsehair of the same shade. They carried bouquets of Johanna Hill roses.

Mr. Joseph McCarthy was best man, and the ushers were Mr. Leo McCarthy, Mr. Key Mulvihill, Mr. James Mulvihill, Mr. Robert Simpson, Mr. John Simpson and Mr. Arthur Simpson.

A wedding breakfast and reception was given at the Shoreham. The decorations were yellow spring flowers, palms and ferns. The bridal couple were assisted in receiving by Mrs. Simpson, who wore a gown of pansy blue crepe trimmed with steel beads, a black cire satin hat and a corsage of gardenias, and Mrs. J. Joseph McCarthy, mother of the bridegroom, who wore a gown of black velvet and lace, with a black felt hat trimmed with galyak.

Dr McCarthy and his bride later left on a wedding trip, the latter wearing a brown suit trimmed with blue fox, with an eggshell blouse, and a small hat and accessories of brown. They will reside at 4807 Seventeenth street on their return.

Wedding Guests.

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Enscor, Mrs. Frank McFee and the Rev. Preston Campbell, all of Baltimore; Col. and Mrs. William Peak, of Lorton, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. James Mullins, and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph McKinley, of New York City; Mgr. P. C. Gavan, the Rev. Friends School Principals Praise Washington Parents

But They Decry Effects of "Mass Instruction," Think Children Need More Occupational Work and Sports for Their Development.

This is another of the interviews with Washington educators which have been appearing on this page recently. They deal with problems of children and of parenthood. We will weclome letters from our readers giving their own opinions on the subject discussed.

By Elizabeth Young.

Neglectful mothers and problem children have been comparatively few in the experience of Sidwells' Friends School, one of the oldest private schools in Washington.

"Our relations have been mostly with earnest mothers and their teachable children," the two distinguished principals of the institution, Thomas W. Sidwell and his wife, Frances Haldeman Sidwell, declared yesterday.

They hold a happier view of the educational scene in the Nation's Capital than does Miss Jessie La Salle, assistant superintendent of District schools. She said in a recent interview on this page that the failure of Washington parents in good circumstances to provide their children with real homes is resulting in problems of discipline and deportment which overtax the facilities of educators.

"We find much to admire in most parents," Mr. and Mrs. Sidwell said. "We realize that under present social and economic conditions the work of rearing children has become increasingly complicated and difficult.

Life Used to Be Simpler.

"Formerly when most of us lived in the country or in small villages, life was simple and free from many present distractions. Each member of the family shared in its activities. Parents and children worked together rearing and caring for animals, preparing and cultivating the fields and gardens. From these wholesome activities of mind and body, there developed strength, resourcefulness and dependability.

"With the movement of population to cities, much of the simple life was left behind and a more complicated one entered upon. The city, however, provides a wealth of opportunity that was lacking in the country, whilst retaining some of the best features of country life.

"The country day school meets to an unusual degree the needs of city children and the trend of schools in general will be toward this type."

The Sidwells feel the time is not far off when the Government will see the futility of attempting mass instruction for children, and will appropriate funds for schools which insure individual attention to future citizens.

"In the meantime, private initiative must continue to point the way as it has in the past," they said. "It must provide gymnasiums and large playing fields, so that every child may take part in the popular games of football, baseball, basket ball, soccer, hockey and tennis. Children too small for these will have other games and make use of apparatus and equipment suited to their needs.

"Youth will be busy doing worthwhile things and growing into normal men and women. Of course this kind of education is expensive and out of reach of most people until our Government comes to their aid, as it will eventually, when it sees that money spent wisely on the education of its youth will not only reduce the number of problem children but the number of inmates cared for in our penal and reformatory institutions."

Vigilance Needed.

In pleading with parents for greater vigilance over children and more cooperation with schools, Miss La Salle had pointed out that curtailed budgets handicap educators in meeting the increasing evil of "problem children" in Washington schools.

"We attach great importance to what Miss La Salle may say, because of her unusually fine professional training and wide experience with problem children," said the Sidwells. "While some of her statements are rather startling and distress us, we do not question them.

"We have seen the ill effects of broken homes and well-meaning but thoughtless parents, on children. But on the whole, we are impressed with the unselfish devotion of mothers and the fact that with the coming of a child, there comes the spirit of parenthood which counts no sacrifice or effort too great for the welfare of the child."

The Friends School was established in Washington in 1883. Distinguished members of its alumni include the Princess Chichibu, daughter of the one-time Ambassador Matsudaira, from Japan; Nelson Johnson, present Minister to China; Redfield Proctor, former Governor of Vermont; Archibald Roosevelt, and Allan and Herbert Hoover, jr. Col. Charles A. Lindbergh also studied there.

Three hundred pupils are enrolled there today, in classes ranging from kindergarten through high school.

Paris Modes Steal Glamour From Theater

Mistinguett Dons Plumes, But She Wears Them in New Ways.

Paris (AP).—The styles which trail across European stages—often advance notes on the coming mode—set a new record in glamor this winter.

Mistinguett's Gown Striking.

Ostrich feathers trailing from shoulders to train tip, fluffy aigrettes floating from shoulders and seductive tea gowns of lace and velvet sound a note of ultrafemininity.

Mistinguett, long famous for her feathers, has doffed her heavy headdress of ostrich and wears her plumage in new ways. In the new revue at the Folies Bergeres she trips across the spangled stage in one scene wearing a gown of coral velvet with an ostrich feather boa in the same shade reaching from her chin to the tip of her train.

In another she dazzles her audience with an evening gown of shimmering white satin with shoulders banded in white aigrettes.

When Lynn Fontanne planned for the London opening of "Reunion in Vienna" in January, she selected, among other things, three trailing tea gowns designed by Molyneux.

One in Green Velvet.

One of chartreuse green velvet, which cloaks her slender figure like shimmering molten paint, is designed with long full bishop sleeves and a bodice which twists in front to form a girdle.

Another of shell pink lace has full open sleeves designed to flutter round white arms, and a third combines a sleeveless gown of yellow chiffon with a jacket of the same shade.

Tree House Equipped With Electric Lights

Aiken, S. C. (AP).—People call F. O. Banks "the man who lives in a tree," and he's proud of the title, for that's just what he does. His "castle in the air," as he calls it, is located at Langley Lake, between Aiken and Augusta, Ga.

Resting 30 feet above the ground, his house consists of one room ten feet square, equipped with electric lights. Ladders lead from the ground. But his domicile isn't large enough to suit him, and he's planning to add a room or two with a few more household conveniences.

Couldn't See Those Stars!

Hollywood is grand, says Betty Gray, Washington beauty contest winner who has just returned from there. But she prefers the stage to the movies, and expresses disappointment that stars are not always what they seem.

Just Folks.

The Motorboor Menace.

I find I'm growing more and more
To hate the reckless "motorboor,"
A name invented by a friend
(Upon whose judgment I depend),
Without invective to describe
A strangely selfish auto tribe
Whose members, driving night and day,
Give no one else the right of way.

A "motorboor" no warning heeds
As up or down the road he speeds,
And gentlemen who drive with care
Of him must constantly beware
Lest turning right into a street
This demon of the road they meet
And find with crash of steel and glass
He's left no room for them to pass.

A "motorboor" at home may be
A man of peace and courtesy,
But on the road, severe and grim,
He thinks the road belongs to him;
That laws for other men were made
And not by him to be obeyed.
Like mad he takes the dangerous curves
And always too far out he swerves.

He'll crowd his neighbor to the side,
Where there are ditches deep and wide.
He'll frighten women as he drives,
Nor ever think he's risking lives.
One can not count the grief and ache
That daily follow in his wake,
So friends and stranger, I implore
You not to be a "motorboor."

A cheap box of water-color paints, given him by an aunt when he was 5 years old, started Howard Greer on a career in art. First he drew people. Later he drew clothes. Now he wields the big shears and makes colorful and distinguished apparel for Katharine Hepburn and other stage and screen notables. He also has a smart off-stage clientele. But Greer isn't impressed with his outstanding success as a designer. He wants to be a writer.

Howard Greer Still Hopes To Abandon His Big Shears

But the Countless Fashionable Women Who Swear by His Gowns Will Never Consent to His Return to Word Pictures on a Typewriter.

Glamourous costumes, down through the ages, have been one of woman's most important allies in the game of romance. A new and becoming gown gives her a radiant charm that is the secret of attraction.

Just as glamourous as the gowns are the men and women behind the scenes—the great dressmakers, who by a few magical snips of the scissors and by tiny stitches put in just the right place, create visions of loveliness out of exquisite materials.

This is the sixteenth of a series of articles telling the stories of the world's most famous dressmakers.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

When tempestuous Katharine Hepburn pranced off the movie lots a few weeks ago to return to her first love, the stage, she insisted upon dragging a certain young man from Hollywood with her. The certain young man was Howard Greer, who had designed the star's wardrobe for the pictures, "Christopher Strong" and "Morning Glory." Miss Hepburn had been so delighted with those clothes that she arranged for the same designer to make the costumes for her play, "The Lake."

When Garbo visited her native Sweden several months ago her trunks bulged with Greer creations, although another designer makes her apparel for pictures.

In addition to screen luminaries, Howard Greer's Hollywood shop in Sunset boulevard has a distinguished off-stage clientele and some of his clothes are being shown by fine stores in New York and Chicago.

But the designer, a husky native of the Nebraska plains, is a little bored with it all. He doesn't care much about chiffons, organdies, and taffetas. He wants to become famous as a writer, not as a dressmaker. Every year he turns out at least one novel or play.

HOWARD GREER.

This has been going on for quite a long time and it doesn't seem to perturb the young man that his little brain children are still in an orphan state. He has magnificent confidence that some day they will be taken into a nice warm home, known as a publishing house. In the meantime there are the chiffons, organdies, and taffetas. They make him a living, and a very handsome living it is, too.

Brain Orphans.

Greer says he was lured into art at the unsuspecting age of 5 when a visiting aunt gave him a cheap set of water color paints. The solicitous aunt stayed on at the Greer farm for several days, and, little Howard, to show his appreciation for his gift, used it. This brought about his downfall.

He has never been able to get away from color since. First he spread violent hues over the advertisements in newspapers. Then the creative instinct asserted itself and he made houses, fantastic trees, and gentlemen whose arms were longer than their legs. By the time he was 7 he was devoting all his talent for sketching to the human form but, since he always drew the feet first and worked up toward the head, his figures usually had good ankles but queer looking necks and wobbly chins.

Became More Human.

At the age of 12 he realized that heads had their good points as well as feet. From then on his drawings bore at least a faint resemblance to people instead of looking like prehistoric animals with the colic.

But through all this artistic endeavor ran the thought that writing was the most desirable career. Young Howard was determined to become an author. In his high-school days he never bothered to consider whether he should eventually write plays, poetry, books or newspaper articles. When he entered the University of Nebraska, however, he decided that he would produce the Great American Novel. He has—five or six times—but the publishers seem to have entered a conspiracy to keep these masterpieces from going to press.

In college Greer hated mathematics, chemistry, botany, and other sciences. The annoying thing was that several of these subjects were required by the curriculum. Greer left the university in his junior year, more full of disgust than knowledge. He managed to rake together the staggering sum of $34 so that he could get to Chicago and keep an appointment he had made with Lady Duff Gordon, known as Lucile and, at that time, an important figure in the dress-making world.

A Big Job.

The young Nebraskan, after leaving the university, had to get a job of some sort. He convinced Lucile that he had the makings of a great designer and that she should add him to her staff. For two months he worked in her Chicago establishment, receiving $15 a week and saving seven. He lived in an attic and cooked tomatoes in a sauce-pan over a gas jet for his evening meal. He swears that caviar has never tasted as delicious as those tomatoes.

At the ened of two months in Chicago he was brought on to New York by Lucile and put to work in the sketch room with experienced designers. He hadn't been in the sketch room long before he realized that his ignorance of dressmaking and designing was nothing short of abysmal. What few original ideas he had possesseed curled up and died in awe of the experienced designers who swarmed all over the place. There didn't seem to be any place for Howard. When a year had gone by he was informed that the establishment of Lucile could do without his services.

A Bad Fall.

Although he had known that his dismissal was inevitable, young Greer was plunged into the depths of despair when it came. The depths of despair seemed hardly deep enough for such a tragic situation and he was seriously considering the depths of the East River when he returned to his hall bedroom and found an urgent invitation beneath his door. The invitation was from the United States Government. It invited the would-be designer to become a member of the United States Army.

Greer had been among the first selected for the draft. He was rather pleased. Now he could tell his friends that he had been forced to resign from Lucile's so that he could serve his country. He became pleasantly excited about the whole thing. War, flying flags, marching men, France, uniforms—it appealed to him as a romantic, thrilling adventure.

After six months training in Camp Upton and a year in the trenches, Greer was demobilized but decided to remain for a while in Europe. He stayed a year and a half, working on another in the series of great American novels and stringing together several plays that have never been acted.

Whenever the wolf's howl at his door assumed symphonic proportions the struggling author would dash off a sketch or fashion article and sell it to the Chicago Tribune or the now defunct Theater Magazine.

If he received a check for as much as $25 he would slam the door in the wolf's face and gallantly set out for a week's jaunt in Normandy or for a stroll through the French Alps.

No More Mazuma.

Then suddenly the Chicago Tribune and Theater Magazine seemed to run out of checks, but they evidently had an unlimited supply of rejection slips. A steady flow of these slips inspired Greer to make one of the shrewdest business deals of his life. He sold his typewriter and started off merrily on foot for the Riviera. At the famous watering place he met Paul Poiret, then occupying a lofty place in the haute couture, and sold him some fashion sketches which netted something over 200 francs.

This sudden affluence was almost more than Greer could bear. He left the Riviera, walked to Nice, took a fifth-class passage on a boat to Corsica, landed in Bastia, and spent four idyllic weeks tramping across the island. When he arrived at Ajaccio he still had 200 francs. He had inveigled the peasants into letting him sketch them, their cottages, and their barnyard animals, in return for food and lodging. Then he spent a happy, untroubled

Mrs. Sanger Asks Roosevelt Aid for Birth Control

Seeks President's Backing for Proposed Federal Law.

President Roosevelt was called upon yesterday to advise Congress of the importance of amending Federal legislation prohibiting dissemination of birth-control information.

Headed by Margaret Sanger and Dr. James Bossard of the University of Pennsylvania, a committee of five women and four men called at the White House to leave with the President a copy of a resolution adopted at the Wednesday morning session of the three-day Conference on Birth Control and National Recovery. The delegation was received by Marvin H. McIntyre, the President's secretary.

On the premise that "the Federal Government is endeavoring to solve the problem of unemployment and solution of this problem requires a limitation of workers in accordance with the job supply," the resolution "respectfully urged" the President to lend his support in favor of birth control.

Before Congress Today.

Hearings on the Pierce bill, to repeal the section in a 60-year-old statute which prohibits birth-control information as "obscene," come before Congress today.

Expressing the opinion "that there never was a time when two organizations such as your own and ours could better be united in a common purpose in the interests of humanity than at present," the conference likewise forwarded to Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, of the National Conference on the Cause and Cure of War, a similar resolution.

"It is recognized by scientific students that overpopulation has been one of the greatest underlying causes of war, and the only effective means of preventing overpopulation is rational control of reproduction," this resolution reads.

Measures taken by the Government on birth control will determine civilization's trend to either fascism or a socialized state, the conference was told by LeRoy S. Bowman, of the Child Development Institute of Columbia University.

"A cruel, senseless, socially abortive effort such as that of Hitler and Mussolini to induce the propagation of many and, therefore, necessarily poorly trained humans, will mean fascism," he declared.

Self-Control the Key.

"But a community effort to control the growth of society in its own best interests by fostering the spread of knowledge that will give to parents the control they need over their own and their children's destinies will most probably be a step toward a desirable cooperative commonwealth. A community that controls itself is a democracy; a rapidly growing mass is apt to be merely fair prey for the exploitation of a dictator and a controlling few.

"We have thought heretofore in National recovery efforts mainly of the socialization of things. The next, inevitable necessary step, is the social control of ourselves."

Civilization has learned nothing since the later days of the Roman Emperors, who fed and amused the populace at public expense, if governments are content to keep successive generations of indigents on dole, James H. S. Bossard, noted sociologist, told the conference.

Dr. James Bossard and Others Accompanying Her to White House.

"If, at a time when we are carrying on relief between three and four million families, we are going to deny and to legally forbid these families the use of agencies and methods which will permit them sanely to control their reproduction in the light of their present circumstances, then we are rejecting the philosophy underlying man's ascent from the jungle," Dr. Brossard said.

Betty Gray, Capital Beauty Back From Film Adventure

A land where stars are not what they seem, and gentlemen still prefer blondes. That is what Miss Betty Gray, Washington beauty contest winner, found when she arrived in Hollywood.

Miss Gray was one of the contest winners picked from eight large cities all over the country to appear in the picture "Eight Girls in a Boat." Her reward was a three months' stay in Hollywood with a contract to appear in the picture.

Like a Dream.

"It all seems like a glorious dream, now," she confided yesterday. "But I am afraid it has spoiled me for everyday life. I can hardly wait to get back.

"At first I was frightened at the thought of going to Hollywood. I had heard so many stories of girls going out there to play in pictures and starving to death. Of course, I did not see anything like that. But I would not advise any girl to go out there hoping to get in pictures, that is, unless she had some background or influence.

"Personally I prefer the stage to the movies, and I hope to work in musical comedy in the future. I am going to study and then try to get a job in a stock company. You see, on the stage you get a chance to live the part you are playing, but in the movies, you never can get the feel of it, because you are likely to play the last scene first, and it is all jumbled up. Sometimes you don't even know what the story is about.

Real Mae West.

"You know I was greatly disappointed in the screen stars," she continued. They are not at all beautiful or glamorous. Why you would pass most of them in the street and not look at them twice. I think the person who surprised me most out there was Mae West. She is not at all the kind of person she acts in pictures. She is little and sweet, and while she uses a lot of slang when talking there is nothing unusual about what she says. And all the time I was there I never saw her smoke a cigarette.

"It was a great thrill seeing myself on the screen for the first time. I didn't know myself! I looked so different from what I do in real life. I was riding a bicycle, and I don't mind telling you that I thought I looked very funny.

"One thing that surprised me. I had expected to see a lot of girls hanging around the studio gates trying to get work. But there weren't any. The only people I saw waiting around were character actors.

Waltz Time in Soft Chiffon

"Andante" is the name Howard Greer, the designer, has given to this graceful evening ensemble of brocaded chiffon with accompanying wrap of black velvet and white fox which is worn by Eleanor Boardman, movie actress. The skirt consists of three circular flounces which accentuate the flowing movement of the enveloping cape.

Mirror Mats Make Table Decoration

They Look Lovely on a White Cloth for a Gala Repast.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

The story goes that one of New York's best known hostesses was planning a dinner party. She had arranged her menu carefully so that each course included some novelty which she felt sure would both please and surprise her guests. The center piece, which appeared at first glance to be an extremely beautiful bowl of flowers, proved on closer inspection to be a new version of the old "grabbag." Ribbon streamers extending out to each place were held down with individual corsages and buttonaires. At a given signal guests were to give a tug at the ribbon and rare favors gathered from all over the world would come bobbing forth.

All these things were well planned, but so far she had devised no unusual and attractive scheme of table decoration. She racked her brain, paced the room, searched through old magazines and papers, but found no inspiration. And then one night she dreamed that she saw her table all set. Instead of the long linen cloth, each place was marked by a mirror mat. There was a smaller one for the bread and butter plate, another for the glass, still another for the demi tasse. In the center were two smaller oblong mirrors for the candlesticks, flanking a long large mirror which held the flower bowl.

The hostess awoke with a start, she says, and wrote down her dream for fear she'd forget it before morning. Next day she sought out the proprietor of a large china store and told him her experience. He agreed to send for the mirrors on one condition, that she would consent to his ordering many more to sell to his customers. It was arranged.

The mirrors came. The dinner party took place. And even now, the story goes, guests stil are talking about the scene which presented itself when they entered the dining room that evening. A long table was aglow with a thousand lights reflected in the bright mirrors from the crystal chandelier above the table.

Now a Washington shop is featuring these mirrors, and selling them right and left, says the buyer. There's a table already set up with them which might prove of interest to all our local hostesses interested in entertaining in new and lovely ways.

It's perfectly obvious that traveling equipment is getting more modern and sophisticated. A Connecticut avenue shop which specializes in all kinds of leather goods and always has the newest and best of traveling equipment, has on display this week a small tan leather case, not much larger than a pocketbook, which contains all kinds of surprises. After it's opened, the first things to meet the eye are two medium-sized bottles. Between them is a small cocktail shaker with a couple of cups and a container for flavorings.

It isn't only the college student who'd like an arrangement of this sort to insure her against a drought, but almost any traveler who dreads the tedium of long train rides and the monopoly of plain fruit punches.

Incidentally, shoppers, the case is now on sale for half its original price.

A well-known gift shop located in a local hotel simply has to have quality and variety on account of its wide range of customers. Recently the proprietress received a new batch of handkerchiefs which are quite "superior." The linen is the very finest. The designs carefully hand-stitched in attractive designs. Some of them have unusually attractive appliques in rose and green. Others are designed with petit point in a variety of colors. These handkerchiefs are ideal as gifts because they're not only practical, but theyre lovely-looking as well.

Have you ever seen this odd, stiff material called Chinese grass linen? It is sheer and as stiff as if it had been starched and makes the daintiest luncheon sets imaginable. A cloth 54 inches square, and 6 napkins are just the thing for our next fancy luncheon. The napkins are quite appropriate as cocktail napkins too. The linen is embroidered in lovely floral designs, with the delicacy that only the Chinese can accomplish.

The toilet goods department of a downtown store boasts some terribly attractive little candleholders which have the oddest candles we ever saw. In fact, they aren't really candles, they're bottles of perfume shaped liked candles, with stoppers representing the wick.

Everyone who knows the piquancy and charm of Tony Sarg's marionettes will chortle with glee at his printed linen. It is gayly colored in vivid design, and would give any bridge table the frivolity that is necessary after a ponderous game. A cloth and four napkins are priced at $3, or six napkins are only $1.25. The patterns are just crude enough to fit into a modern den, and sprightly enough to interest our most world-bored guest.

To the Earth—

By Katherine Smith.

I've watched the fall of slimly shattered rain
Defeated by the sullenness of sod;
I've wept with the brutality of pain,
And turned my hands in grievance, up to God.

I've found no echos in the nothingness
Of night, and knew no solace in the sky,
And so, defeated by one stubbornness,
We seek our peace on earth, the rain and I.

Soviet Envoy's Wife Arrives In New York

Mme. Troyanovsky Eager to Study U. S. Art and Language.

New York, Jan. 17 (AP).—Mme. Alexander Troyanovsky, wife of the first Soviet Ambassador to the United States, arrived on the Olympic today and talked with animation of her interest in art.

A merry-faced woman with glasses and severely simple clothes, Mme. Troyanovsky looked more like an amiable American schoolteacher than the wife of a foreign diplomat. Her son Oleg, 14, with whom she traveled, speaks English and wants to learn to play American football.

"I want to see your theaters and hear the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra," said Mme. Troyanovsky through Oleg and several voluntary interpreters. She speaks almost no English.

She has heard phonograph records of the Philadelphia orchestra, it seems.

Plans to Learn English.

"I am a great admirer of art. If I put artistic things first, it is because you can be interested in them without knowing the language. But I am also much interested in studying your mechanical development. Only, to understand technical things one must know the language."

Mme. Troyanovsky said she was going to start studying English at once, and study hard. Then she wants to "look a little around" at America.

"I hope to stay here a long time," she said eagerly.

Mme. Troyanovsky is particularly fond of music. Also, it came out unexpectedly, she has studied medicine and done some work in surgery. While she believes in careers for married women, the fact that her husband was shifted about in the diplomatic service has prevented her from going on with hers, she said.

The new mistress of the Russian Embassy wore the simplest of brown knitted dresses, a plain black felt hat, and a fur coat.

Her husband went down the bay on a Coast Guard cutter to meet her, accompanied by Pete R. A. Bogdanov, head of the Amtorg Trading Corporation, official Soviet commercial agency. Mme. Troyanovsky literally walked a plank from the Olympic to the tossing cutter and came back with them.

The Troyanovskys came here from five years in Japan, where Mme. Troyanovsky learned Japanese, and young Oleg learned English. Mme. Troyanovsky had a good crossing to New York, she said.

America's a Storehouse of Colorful Lore, Says 'Diseuse,' Who Recited at White House

Jesicca Lee, Elocutionist, Writes Her Own Sketches.

By Elizabeth Perrow.

America is as rich in tradition as any European country. No land has a more picturesque folk lore, or more colorful national characters.

Because of her belief in this statement Miss Jesicca Lee, internationally known diseuse, bases her sketches on characters in American history and folk lore.

Accompanied by Miss Ruth Terry, who furnishes the music for her performances, she came to Washington to give a special performance at the White House. And accustomed as she is to performing for notables, she was quite excited about the honor.

"I have been to Washington often of course," she confided in her suite at the Mayflower yesterday. "But never on such a festive occasion.

At the White House.

"I enjoyed every minute I was at the White House," she continued. "It is amazing how Mrs. Roosevelt sets the tempo there. Everything is formal enough to fit the dignity of the occasion, and yet informal enough for everyone to have a good time. Mrs. Roosevelt was especially cordial to the artists. She quite won our hearts.

"I gave the sketch 'Dolly Madison in the White House at Tea Time' because I thought everyone there would be interested in one of our most famous First Ladies. The Negro meeting sketch was given because it gives an accurate picture of Negro worship in some sections of the South."

Miss Lee, who is a native of Mississippi, has studied in many schools, both in this country and abroad. But she says that is unimportant.

"What I am really interested in is making the historical characters in our national history so vivid and alive that they will seem as real as the people we meet every day. For that reason I try to make them live again in my sketches. At present I write all my own scenes and the people in them seem just as much alive to me as real people."

One of Miss Lee's most famous interpretations was of Marc Connelly's "Green Pastures." She recalled reciting it once before the author himself.

Cutting Lines.

"I know how he must have felt," she said, with a laugh. "It is a terrible feeling for an author to sit in an audience and hear the thing he has written cut to pieces and recited by some one else. And oh, how it hurts to have some one unfeelingly cut a line you have labored over for weeks. But I tried to do it in the way he would like best.

"I gave the same recital on the French steamer Lafayette one night, and something funny happened. I had told the ship's officers, that I would need a small platform to speak from. I wondered why it took them so long to make it; but imagine my surprise when the night arrived and I found that they had erected a huge platform in the grand salon. On one side they had draped the French flag and on the other the American. It looked like the setting for a political rally. I felt very small in the midst of that splendor.

"No, I don't find it at all hard changing from one character to another. It is as easy as just being myself. In fact, the characters seem to be a part of me. I have done sketches with as many as seven characters. I liked it. The more people I create the more fun I have.

"Why I prefer this particular kind of acting I really don't know. I just love it, and I have never considered going into any other branch of the theater.

"And I like it even better since I began writing my own things. I should have done that long before I did. But then," she concluded whimsically, "everybody knows that Southerners are lazy!"

America's Rich—In Color, She Says

Miss Jesicca Lee, who recites her own dramatic sketches, finds plenty of material in American tradition and folk lore. She came to Washington to recite for President and Mrs. Roosevelt at the White House.

Today's Maternity Apparel Has a Smart Up-to-the-Minuteness in Fashion Detail

By Amos Parrish.

New York, Jan. 17.—Having a baby is no longer any reason for a woman to say, "Oh, I can't go. My clothes look so dowdy." Today's maternity dresses look just like many other dresses. In fact, it's only in the clever ways they're made adjustable that you'd know they were designed for their specific purpose. And many a wearer refuses to discard them after the eventful arrival, because they're as smart as anything else.

Of course, there are still coat dresses and surplice closing dresses. And to some women they are always more becoming than any other type.

But the mother-to-be who wants something different, more youthful and more of this season has plenty to choose from.

Plastron Fronts.

The dress with plastron or gilet front is a good new type. One that's in fashion for anybody, as you know.

Maternity dresses usually have their plastron in the same color as the rest of the dress, but if you want yours contrasting, as they are apt to be in regular dresses, they can be found that way, too.

In the maternity dress the plastron is worn over a wrapped dress which is fastened at the waist by evenly spaced snaps so it may be adjusted without resewing the fasteners.

In the dress sketched this plastron ties around at the back.

Shoulder Bulk.

Creating bulk through the shoulders is a well known balancing trick of the woman who is normally stout through the waistline. And many of the new maternity dresses make excellent use of this device.

In the illustrated dress it's a softly ruffled collar which builds out the top of the dress creating a better sense of balance and proportion throughout the figure.

Another dress we saw . . . a side-closing one . . . had a wide frilled collar of stiff white bengaline which extended out over the shoulder tops to create this concealing balance.

Then there are simply wrapped dresses which are made interesting and up-to-date in many ways. They use white pique vestees softened by bows; white revers pleated at the shoulders; and all sorts of soft jabot and Ascot tie treatments. And even the fashionable peplum is found on some.

Many of the fashionable silks make up most satisfactorily in these dresses. Novelty crepe weaves, ribbed silks, small prints on dark grounds, heavy sheers . . . they are all fine. For unlike the smooth surfaced fabrics they do not catch the highlights which tend to increase size.

(Copyright, 1934, by Amos Parrish.)

Dresses of the types described are available in Washington in all the better class shops and department stores.

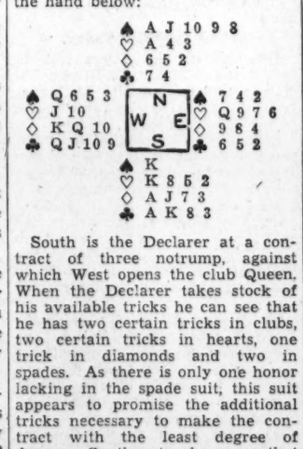
Creating an Entry by Unblocking.

The tactics by which the Declarer may secure the maximum number of tricks in the hand through establishing a long suit require, of course, that the hand having the long suit contain sufficient entries to permit not only the establishment of the cards in it, but entry to the hand after the suit is established. The opponents of the Declarer naturally will make every effort to frustrate the Declarer's plan, and the Declarer must be watchful to see that his own tactics of play do not work to the benefit of the opposing side.

An example of creating an entry in a suit by unblocking is given in the hand below:

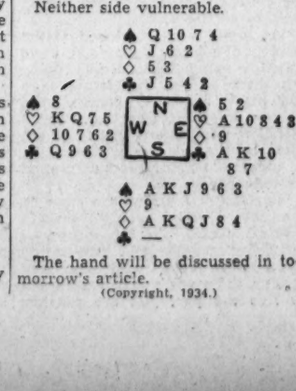


South is the Declarer at a contract of three notrump, against which West opens the club Queen. When the Declarer takes stock of his available tricks he can see that he has two certain tricks in clubs, two certain tricks in hearts, one trick in diamonds and two in spades. As there is only one honor lacking in the spade suit, this suit appears to promise the additional tricks necessary to make the contract with the least degree of danger. South notes, however, that outside of the spade suit the Dummy contains only a single entry card—namely, the heart Ace. To lead the King of spades and play low from the Dummy will permit, it is true, the establishment of four tricks in the spade suit, but only two of these can ever be realized in the play because of the lack of entries in Dummy. South's proper play, therefore, after winning the first trick with the club King, is to lead the spade King and overtake with the Ace in Dummy. Any spade is then led and the suit contained until the Queen falls. He thus makes four tricks in spades, no matter how long West may continue to hold up the spade Queen, as the heart Ace permits reentry to the Dummy and thus assures fulfillment of the contract. If he fails to do this, the contract must be defeated.

Tomorrow's Hand.

By what unusual bidding can North and South reach a contract of seven spades with a fair chance of its fulfillment?

East, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

Wife Divorced Heywood Broun To Be Old Maid

He's Grand, Says Ruth Hale, Who Kept Her Name When She Married Him.

New York, Jan. 17 (U.P.).—Ruth Hale, head of the Lucy Stone League which advocates women retaining their family names after marriage, today explained why she got a divorce from Heywood Broun, columnist and author.

"I always wanted to be an old maid," she said. "I should never have married at all. But being so much in love with Broun, and thinking I could outride my own psychological being, I did marry, and I did have a most enchanting boy. Then it was a long road to travel to get back to being a spinster."

The Brouns married in 1917 and the divorce which Miss Hale obtained in Nogales, Mexico, several months ago, seemed to have little effect on their routine. Broun and Miss Hale dined together last night and they are collaborating on a play and a book. They have separate apartments in the same building, having lived apart for several years.

Miss Hale said she went to Mexico for her divorce because she had no particular cause for divorce.

"I wouldn't make an accusation against that man for anything in the world," she said. "He has been perfectly magnificent. Our parting was quiet, gentle, and refined."

The Brouns have one child, Heywood Hale Broun, now 15. The divorce awarded the child to the custody of both parents and a property agreement for him was signed last spring.

How to Keep Well

Silent Gallstones.

The title of this article raises some questions. Can any gallstone talk? If one gallstone can talk, how can any be silent? If gallstones can and do talk, and we know them by their talk, how can we know silent gallstones? Which gallstones are silent.

To begin with, about the most prevalent malady is gallstones. It has been said that 10 per cent of all people 40 years of age and over have gallstones. Probably the figure is high, but that does not disturb the fact that the aliment is most prevalent.

It is said that almost all fat, indolent women over 40 years of age have them. There is no merit in picking on women. The disorder is prevalent enough in men.

It is true that the aggregate number of colds in a year suffered by 100,000,000 persons exceeds the number of cases of gallstones. A cold, however, is gone in two weeks, while gallstones hang on for a lifetime. Therefore, if you were to sample the entire population on a given date, and if you got to the bottom facts, you would find more persons will gallstones than you would with colds.

A fair proportion of the gallstones speak. They speak in terms of dyspepsia, sour stomach, waterbrash, slow digestion, belching, night attacks of indigestion. Some speak in terms of pain, gall-bladder colic, and local soreness and tenderness. Some speak in terms of jaundice. But as a rule gallstones talk by proxy. The engineer might say that their speech requires instrumentation. They can talk only through the microphone or the loud speaker. Most of their talking is through the stomach. A gallstone scratches the inside of the gall bladder, but the yell we hear comes from the stomach. The man has gas on his stomach.

If there is gallstone colic the voice comes to us more directly, but in gallstone colic there is generally vomiting and that comes from the stomach. The talking is both direct and over the phone.

As a rule the talk starts up only when the stone moves. As long as it lies still, no scratching of the gallbladder wall occurs and there is no talk.

Large gallstones are apt to remain quiet and small ones to push around. Little ones try to escape from the gall bladder down the bile ducts. That is the chief cause of colic. Large ones are content to stay in the gall bladder. Rough stones are apt to cause pain; smooth ones are less apt to do so. If there is but one large stone it is apt to be smooth. If there are many they are apt to be scratchy.

Even when gallstones are restless they move only a small part of the time. Most of the time they are still—and silent.

For all of these reasons gallstones are usually silent. Some never cause symptoms and some cause them only at rare intervals. Some are quiet enough until the host is guilty of some indiscretion, such as eating improperly, drinking, riding horseback or jolting in some other way, becoming constipated or taking a purgative. In some way we prod the animals and the tiger growls or the lion roars.

If we have had gallstones with symptoms and the belching or other speech stops, even permanently, it does not follow that we are cured. The stones have merely become silent.

Age and Sleep.

B. O. writes: In the course of a discussion as to the amount of sleep required by individuals, A stated that for a person of 70 or more the usual eight hours of sleep is not required, and that such a person would require only five or six hours' sleep. B's opinion is that as the individual grows older and less active the person requires more sleep than a younger and more active person.

Reply.

The average person of 70 years of age needs eight hours' sleep daily. Many of them do not get it because something awakens them toward morning, after which they fail to relax and go back to sleep.

Prosy Cucumber Assumes Exciting Role on Dinner Menu.

Vegetable entrees when served at a very formal dinner should be as interesting as the host's table talk, as appealing to the eye as the dinner gown of the hostess, and as delicious as—well, as possible. It is almost necessary that they be unusual, because they add an element of excitement to a meal, and excitement leaves a lasting impression, and makes your guests hope that they will be invited again, and yet again.

There are odd ways of preparing simple things, and the result is novelty without extravagance, and interest without added trouble on the part of the cook.

Take, for instance the cucumber. It is usually served sliced in a salad, but who would think that it can be stewed or fried and still retain its sauve polish?

Here is a cucumber dish that is almost a meal in itself.

Cucumber Farci.

3 medium cucumbers
1 cup cooked chicken, minced
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
1 tablespoon cooked ham, minced
2 tablespoons cream
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon paprika
¼ teaspoon onion juice
¼ cup white wine or lemon juice
1 cup meat stock

Peel cucumbers, cut in two lengthwise, scoop out the inside carefully. Mix chicken, ham, parsley, cream and seasoning thoroughly and fill cavity of cucumbers with the mixture. Put in baking pan, cover with mixture of stock and wine (or lemon juice) and bake in moderate oven about half an hour, basting often. Cover with browned crumbs and serve with sauce from the baking pan.

If you have the facilities for deep fat frying treat your cucumbers in this way, if not, they may be sauted.

Cucumbers Fried or Sauted.

3 cucumbers.
Salt.
Pepper.
Flour or cornmeal.

Peel cucumbers, cut them lengthwise in half-inch slices. Dust with salt and pepper, roll in flour or cornmeal. Saute in butter, or brush with egg, roll in crumbs and fry in deep fat.

Cucumber jelly salad is a change from the usual sliced form in which they are generally served.

Cucumber Jelly Salad.

2 cucumbers, peeled and sliced
1 slice onion
½ teaspoon salt
Dash pepper
1 pint cold water
1 tablespoon gelatin

Place cucumbers, onion and seasonings in cold water and let simmer until cucumbers are soft. Add gelatin which has been dissolved in a little warm water. Line a mold with fresh sliced cucumbers, pour in jelly slowly, chill. Unmold and serve in bed of lettuce with French dressing.

Howard Greer Makes Hollywood's Gowns

Steerage Passenger.

This nomadic existence finally lost at least a part of its charm and the Nebraskan decided to return to his native shores and seriously attack the writing of drama. He crossed the Atlantic in the steerage and got off the boat with exactly 13 francs in his former service trousers. While haunting the offices of producers with his plays, he turned again to fashion sketching and kept himself alive in a Greenwich Village basement by selling designs to Hickson's and by creating the costumes for the third edition of the Greenwich Village Follies.

It was his costumes for this revue that brought him to the attention of a large movie studio. He went to Hollywood on a six weeks' contract and remained with the studio for six years. He then started his own shop in Sunset Boulevard, but continues to design for pictures.

Real Temperament.

Howard Greer is capable of working himself into an apoplectic rage over some minor detail. In a grave crisis he is extraordinarily calm and self-possessed. While he is highly sensitive to the color combinations in the clothes he makes for women, he has been known to appear in a red and white striped shirt, a blue polka-dot tie, a yellow handkerchief and a gray plaid suit.

He is inordinately fond of dogs, quarter slot machines, rural surroundings, blue denims, and the mountains. He loathes cats, the sea, and night clubs. He once liked France and the French people so much that he thought seriously of becoming a French citizen. Then he got homesick and changed his mind. He has been to Paris every summer for the last seven years, but has not been inside a French dressmaking establishment. He believes in designing his own things, not in adapting other people's ideas.

His clothes are admirably conservative with enough sparkle to make them interesting. They are quietly elegant without a trace of the theatrical or bizarre, and while they make a distinguished appearance in off-stage life, they are hugely effective on stage or screen in a suave, subtle way.

Meanwhile the young man from Nebraska still thinks of designing as a side line and dreams of the day when he will achieve fame as a writer.

Read in tomorrow's Woman's Page another of these stories of the world's great dressmakers.

Coral on Black Marocain.

Paris (AP).—The Countess Cavadonga, whose husband renounced his rights to the Spanish throne in order to marry her, attended a smart tea at the Ritz recently wearing a Worth frock of black marocain which had coral jewels at the point of the vee decollete and at the belt fastening. Her hat was in tones of black and coral, and her long coat was of squirrel.

What Today Means

"Capricorn."

If January 18 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 6:30 to 7:30 a. m., from 11 a. m. to 12 noon, and from 3 to 4 p. m. The danger periods are from 9 to 10 a. m., from 1 to 2 p. m. and from 8:30 to 9:30 p. m.

If you were born on January 18, you will eventually have a spiritual awakening. Your inclinations have been to live entirely for material comforts and pleasures and have given little or no though to what religion has to offer the serious seeker. If you wish to succeed, you must take things more seriously, for you now regard nearly everything in rather a frivolous manner. You have a great deal of real depth, which you have kept submerged. On this date you will be successful in everything you undertake in the way of business transactions. You are desirous of power, and for that reason your ambition is to hold office in either social or business organizations.

The child born on January 18 will become a mischievous but lovable youngster, whose innocent pranks will often try your patience, but many a hearty laugh will in the long run compensate for any anxiety they caused. As the child grows older, your hardest task will be to make it realize the importance of concentration. Children born on this date are naturally very smart, but are not inclined to be studious. Their popularity with other children and grown-ups often proves a great distraction to them and keeps them from applying themselves seriously to their school and home work.

The woman born on January 18 usually craves excitement, and will go out of her way to find it. A happy, care-free type of a man has a far greater appeal to her than the conservative sort. The stage has as strong on attraction for her as a candle has for a moth. Her vivacity and instinctive ability to act qualifies her for the theatrical profession. However, love will prove the greatest influence in the life of any one born on this date, so if the day is your birthday, your future revolves around your own decision to either surrender to Cupid's sway or ambition.

The man born on January 18 is a lover of the great out of doors. Nature makes him love her uncivilized places. Hunting and fishing have a greater appeal than any other sport. If you were born on January 18 you are very unconventional and unpretentious. You will succeed best in any line of business that keeps you away from office detail.

People born on January 18 will have greater success in their married lives if they marry others of an opposite type. If January 18 is your natal day it may be well to remember that old phrase, "Not anything too much—that is, avoid excess."

Successful people born on January 18:

Daniel Webster, statesman.
Richard C. Taylor, geologist.
Richard Yates, statesman.
Walter Satterlee, artist.
James W. Grayden, inventor.
Seth Low, former Mayor of New York City.

D.C. Planning Before Three Bodies Today

Host of Improvements Will Be Discussed During Sessions.

Arts, Park Commissions and Treasury Board Will Convene.

Recommendations affecting every section of the District and ranging in subject from slum clearance to the Oscar Straus Memorial, will emanate from the meetings today and tomorrow of the Fine Arts Commission, National Capital Park and Planning Commission and the Treasury Board of Architectural Consultants.

The Arts and Planning Commissions will meet separately this morning. In the afternoon there will be a joint session of these two groups and the Treasury Board. Tomorrow morning the commissions will meet jointly, returning to separate sessions tomorrow afternoon.

Because of the large number of projects requiring action, both the arts and planning meetings may carry over through Saturday.

Survey Plans Ready.

With Chairman Frederic A. Delano presiding, the planning group will announce final arrangements for a survey of colored residents in the Southwest and Southeast sections, to determine housing conditions. A civil works project, funds have been allotted for 25 enumerators to gather data useful in planning low cost housing and as supplementary information for the Senate's current rent investigation. John Nolen, jr., director of planning, will report on a plan for the residential rejuvenation of Southwest Washington.

John Ihlder, architectural authority on slum clearance and low cost housing, will lead a discussion of the Capper-Norton alley bill, which originated with the commission.

This afternoon's joint session will see discussion of the future Federal building program. All three groups, in the past, have favored different areas for development; the Fine Arts Commission espousing Pennsylvania avenue west of the White House, the Southwest section being preferred by the Treasury, and the Planning Commission suggesting the area centering around Virginia and New York avenues.

Other Questions Up.

Other business will include plans for the Great Plaza with its Straus Memorial, the disputed Apex Building in the Federal triangle, a landscaping design for the Mall's cross axis, and extension of the Government warehouse.

The Planning Commission is expected to reemphasize its stand for construction of a municipal airport at Gravelly Point, and to indorse renaming of B street southwest as Independence avenue.

On the agenda for tomorrow morning are selection of a design for the new Chain, or high level, bridge; widening of F street between Seventh and Ninth; improvement of Canal street by building parks and plagrounds, and plans for Columbia Island Plaza.

Another circle on Mount Vernon Memorial Highway, which crosses the island, was planned about 1,200 feet from Arlington Bridge. This detail will be subjected to further discusion at the joint meeting, as a result of the mounting number of accidents at Memorial Circle, on the outskirts of Alexandria.

Parkway Reports Due.

Reports will be given on the proposed Baltimore Parkway, which will go through the Agriculture Department experimental farm at Beltsville, Md., and the further development, with PWA funds, of the Maryland portion of Rock Creek Park.

T. C. Jeffers, staff architect of the planning body, will present details on the landscaping of Takoma-Manor Park recreation center.

The plan for Fort Drive, between Bladensburg road and Kenilworth will be discussed the plannin commission will pass on the District Commissioner's proposal to extend Prospect street to Foxhall road, and connect Prospect and M streets at Pennsylvania avenue.

DeMoll Co. Assigns Assets to Creditors

$113,202 Liabilities Listed Against $38,000.

Assignment of all assets for benefit of its creditors was made in District Supreme Court yesterday by the O. J. DeMoll Co., Inc., Twelfth and G streets northwest.

The company listed assets of $38,000 and liabilities of $113,202.56.

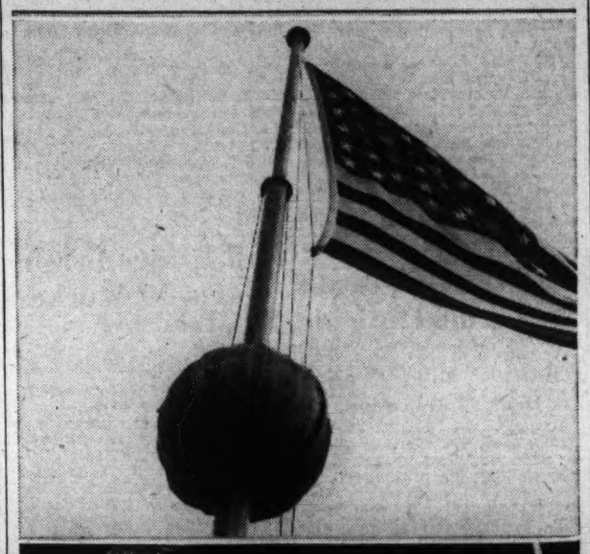
Attorney Joseph A. Kaufmann was named trustee to receive and distribute the assets in payment of "reasonable" claims. He will receive 10 per cent commission.

Justice F. D. Letts, District Supreme Court, signed an order appointing Mr. Kaufmann, and requiring the posting of a nominal bond.

Junior Hadassah Night.

The Adas Israel Synagogue will hold Junior Hadassah night tomorrow night. Miss Rose Kruger, president, assisted by Misses Yetta Dobkin and Toba Schloss, will speak. Rabbi Solomon H. Metz, assisted by Cantor Louis Novick, will conduct the services, after which the Adas Isarael open forum will be led by Miss Sophie Snyder.

Engineer, Head of 'Steam Up,' Controls Nation's Correct Time



Post Staff Photos.

Pulls Switch on Ball Which Drops at High Noon.

Robert S. Marsh, steam engineer, whose post of duty is below the surface of the ground in the sub-basement of the State, War and Navy Building, does something once each day that is done by nobody else in the United States.

His unique daily deed does not deal with pipes and boilers. It is linked with telling folks the right time.

Just before noon of each day, Marsh forsakes his subterranean surroundings, rides an elevator to the top floor of the structure, and unlocks a door behind which a flight of steel steps rises sharply to a single attic room.

The room's contents are a few filing cases and two wooden boxes. A rope leads from one of the boxes to the roof, 20 or 30 feet overhead, through which it passes to the top of a tall flagpole. There it loops through a pulley and drops to the base of the pole, where it is attached to a sphere of steel ribs covered with leather.

That sphere is the "time ball" which drops from the top of the pole to a metal case at the bottom of the staff on the exact stroke of noon each day. Washingtonians who have set their watches by the dropping ball during decades are familiar with the strange time indicator, but the human cog in the controlling equipment is unknown to the great majority.

That "cog" is Marsh. He literally links the sun, moon and stars with the power of gravitation when he pulls the heavy ball to the top of the pole and throws the switch in one of the boxes that connects the equipment with the standard clocks at the Naval Observatory.

That done, the attic room's walls echo with buzzing signals which form the overture preceding arrival of the moment when the sphere is to drop. When that moment comes, delicate apparatus releases the suspended ball. Marsh's hand controls a brake attachment that keeps the ball from hitting the roof too heavily.

Marsh then pulls the switch and returns to his more prosaic duties.

Medical Leaders To Speak Sunday

Pan-American Doctors to Meet in Legation.

Curability of cancer of the larynx will be discussed by Dr. Chevalier Jackson, of Philadlephia, outstanding bronchoscopist, when he addresses the Pan American Medical Association in the Panama Legation Sunday evening.

Dr. Ricardo Alfaro, Minister of Panama, will describe the life work of the first President of Panama, Dr. Amador, also a distinguished physician, while Dr. H. H. Schoenfeldt will review the latest developments in cerebral radiography.

The association, through its president, Dr. H. S. Cummings, also has announced an address by Dr. Henri DeBayle, Charge d'Affaires of Nicaragua, on medical conditions in Central America. A general discussion will be led by Dr. Walter Freeman.

New Building Slated on Old Garfinckel Site

Permit Is Granted for Razing of Downtown Landmark.

Disapeparance of a landmark in the downtown shopping district was forecast yesterday when a permit was granted to Hechinger Engineering Corporation to raze the six-story, brick building formerly housing the department store of Julius Garfinckel & Co. at the southeast corner of Thirteenth and F streets northwest.

On the site will be erected for the Henry Strong estate, of Chicago, owners, a three-story store building of stone, steel and concrete. The property has a frontage of 50 feet on F street and 60 feet on Thirteenth street.

Plans have been prepared by Holabird & Root, of Chicago, with A. B. Mullett & Co., of this city, as associate architects. Th eentire second and third floors of the new structure, affording 12,500 square feet of floor space, will be occupied by Remington-Rand, Inc., now in property at 1106 G street northwest and having its warehouse at 118 Q street northeast.

The new quarters of the corporation will have a private entrance on Thirteenth street, private elevator service and a showroom. On the street floor there will be space for two stores. It is understood that nine applicatoins have been received for this space.

H. Clifford Bangs, former president of the Real Estate Board, was appointed by the Northern Trust Co., Chicago, trustee of the Strong estate, as exclusive agent in leasing.

Plan to Sell City Building Is Revived

Would Start Work on New Municipal Center.

U. S. Held Obligated to Buy Present Structure.

The District Commissioners yesterday revived the idea of selling the District Building to the Federal Government as a means of raising money to start construction of the Municipal Center.

Confronted with Auditor Daniel J. Donovan's estimates for 1936 and 1937, the commissioners decided to separate the $1,000,000 1935 supplemental estimate for the center from the school and library projects and to attach to it legislation authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to pay the District now for the building which the Federal Government promised to buy ultimately.

A similar scheme, minus the legislation, was fostered two years ago, but Treasury officials raised two embarrassing issues and decided to leave the matter to Congress for decision. Since then the District government has let the matter rest.

Rent Question Raised.

Treasury officials early in 1932 pointed out that the District might be entitled to only $2,500,000 as the Federal Government originally paid half the cost of constructing the District Building and they then raised the question of whether the District government would pay rent between the time of the sale and the occupation of the Municipal Center.

Auditor Donovan pointed out at the time, however, that Congress was to blame for the ambitious Municipal Center plan and that the Federal Government was responsible for making the District government move.

After the Federal Government instructed the District government to find other quarters, as the District Building interfered with the Federal Triangle plan, the District drafted plans for a comparatively modest Municipal Center.

Raised Cost $10,000,000.

Congress declared the project would not be in keeping with the Federal building program and raised the cost about $10,000,000 and required the District to buy additional land.

Moreover, Donovan said, it was the District's original understanding that the Federal Government would bear half the cost of the project. This idea was blasted when the legislation was submitted to the Budget Bureau.

Melvin C. Hazen, chairman of the board, said yesterday the $5,000,000 would enable the District to build the first unit of the Municipal Center, as another $1,000,000 would be asked from regular District revenues in the 1937 budget. This would provide a total of $7,000,000

Mrs. Couch to Present "Adventure in Music"

Two Washington composers will speak at the "Adventure in Music" to be presented by Mary Izant Couch at the Women's City Club, 736 Jackson Place, tomorrow evening. Edwin Potter and La Salle Spier will comment on compositions of their own which are to be played by the National Symphony Orchestra at the concert January 28. An invitation has been extended to members of the Washington Composers' Club through the chairman, Mrs. Dorothy Watson.

Justin Lawrie, tenor, will sing a group of songs by Edwin Potter. A discussion of John Powell's "Negro Rhapsody" will be conducted by Mrs. Couch in honor of the composer, who is to appear as soloist in that work at the forthcoming concert.

Motorman Exonorated After Death of Boy, 11

Arthur Miller, of Baltimore, was exonerated by a coroner's jury yesterday in the death of Milton Robinson, 11, colored, killed Saturday by a Washington, Baltimore & Annapolis electric train at Twenty-fourth street and Benning road northeast.

Miller was motorman of the train. The boy, struck as he attempted to cross the tracks, died in Casualty Hospital.

Vidal Urges U. S.-Owned Airport Here

Washington Field Highly Inadequate, House Hearing Told.

Port at Experimental Station Held Best for Capital.

Strongly emphasizing that foreign visitors here recently have been impressed by "what a terrible airport we have in Washington," Eugene L. Vidal, Department of Commerce director of aeronautics, yesterday urged immediate Federal improvement of the present site, at the second day of hearings on the McSwain Airport bill before the House Military Affairs Committee.

"Airports in Europe are equipped with every facility," he said, "not one privately owned, Washington has by far the worst and most inadequate airport for any city of its size, compared with foreign airports."

Its one redeeming feature is its nearness to business activity, he said, in which relation it is second only to the airport at Kansas City. But the present airport is unsafe with its runways of improper length cut in half by Military road, making approach by planes hazardous, he continued.

The Department of Commerce, with its dual program of stimulating private flying by increasing the number of airports and encouraging volume-produced airplanes, has been hampered, he asserted, by airport conditions such as exist in Washington.

Gravelly Point Dangerous.

He frowned on the Gravelly Point airport suggestion, current for some time, saying that it was too close to Bolling Field, where planes fly at night in mass formation. Smaller airports, of about 50 acres, are much safer, he said, as planes may enter them from the same direction. Fifty acres on the Experimental Field in Arlington, Va., would serve for commercial purposes, he added.

Vidal felt that Washington Airport, with its present triffic, could be operated by the Government at a profit, but that the present fees charged to air lines are too high.

Starting the hearing, Chairman McSwain, author of the bill, assured his audience that he was only interested in locating a suitable airport and that he had no program which he intended to "slide through on greased wings." The hearings, he said, are "open forums," where any one may be heard.

Profit in Operation.

Samuel J. Solomon, vice president of the National Airport Corporation, owners of the Washington Airport, testified that the limit of development of the airport under private capital has been reached and that closing of Military road would lower the value of the property. The airport is operating at a profit for the first time in years but his company is not anxious to sell now, he admitted.

Former Representative Royal Johnson and Representative Smith, both of Arlington County, will appear. Residents of Arlington County object to the Government taking over the airport since they would lose $7,000 a year in real estate taxes now paid the county by the airport company.

The Gravelly Point bloc received additional support yesterday with assurances from the Washington Chamber of Commerce and the Federation of Citizen's Associations, that their site has better advantages.

Modoso Sabate, 42, Hurt Sunday, Dies

Auto Driver Ordered Held to Coroner's Jury.

Injured Sunday when struck by an automobile at Thomas Circle, Modosdo Sabate, 42, of 926 L street northwest, chef of a downtown night club, died yesterday in Emergency Hospital.

Phillip M. Baker, 24, of 1317 Spring road northwest, said by police to have been driving the machine which hit Sabate, was ordered held for action of a coroner's jury. He appeared at the Second Precinct station and was released in custody of his attorney, John J. Sirica.

Better Late—

Man Gets House Promised 10 Years Ago.

A 10-year-old promise that G. Bryan Pitts, one-time head of the F. H. Smith Co., gave to Joe Howard, colored employe, 10 years ago, yesterday was made good in District Supreme Court.

Pitts promised Howard a small home at 540 Twenty fourth street northwest, and made a down payment of $250 on a total purchase price of $3,650.

Pitts later paid off the first note, whHe Howard paid off the second. Pitts, however, placed his note in the Commercial National Bank. Then he was sent to jail for 14 years.

Justice Jesse C. Adkins, District Supreme Court, yesterday directed cancellation of the first-trust note.

Howard was an important witness in the Pitts trial. He was found by Government agents in Florida after he had been sought for months.

It's the Nose That Knows How the Whisky Odor Blows

The Treasury Department places responsibility for the quality of the Nation's liquor supply upon half a dozen well-trained noses.

These noses function five floors above the gold vaults, in an ancient laboratory, where red and yellow whisky gurgles through glass tubes and vapors spice the air.

Chemistry isn't worth much in testing whisky, but a good nose is an asset beyond value in deciding whether a bottle of liquor is fit to drink. G. F. Beyer, chief chemist, has such a nose. So have his assistants.

They put the whisky through a still . . . redistill it . . . break it into chemical components . . . boil the latter . . . plunge them in ice water . . . pour in reagents . . . learn exactly what is in the bottle. . . .

How much alcohol . . . how much water . . . how much acid . . . how many esters . . . how much fusel oil . . . how many solids . . .

The Nose Knows.

"But we can't learn much about whisky until we smell it," Beyer explained yesterday. "Whisky making is more of an art than a science."

Testing whisky, therefore, is more like art appreciation than the mere application of chemical formulae.

Beyer poured a few drops of 16-year-old bourbon into a crystal inhaler to demonstrate. He warmed the glass with his hands, squirted in a dash of distilled water, and said, "Smell."

The odor was delicate, but overpowering.

"That is good whisky," he said, taking a final sniff. "Now smell this," he continued, producing a bottle of cheap, blended liquor.

"Smell the raw alcohol? And the flavoring? Awful!"

Most of the whisky now being sold is none too good, but it will get better gradually, he believes. His conversation revealed further that:

There are no simple tests by which the owners of poorly trained noses can tell good whisky. The bottle-shaking, bubble-counting test means nothing, because some distillers put artificial beading oil in their products.

It's Just Too Good.

Bottled-in-bond whisky, aged 16 years or more, is so good that it is hardly fit to drink. It is more like a flavoring extract than a beverage.

G. F. BEYER.

It has a decided "woody" flavor, but if not cut too far, makes an excellent blended liquor.

Good whisky contains plenty of fusel oil. Some of the blends don't contain enough. That is why they taste flat and watery.

The Treasury Department laboratory tested whisky as usuel during all the prohibition decade and so has not lost its touch there, but Beyer is a little worried about the wine situation. His testers haven't had their hands on a bottle of good wine in so long that they have forgotten how it smells. "And how," he asked, "can you tell bad wine if you can't recognize the good?"

Allen Expects Liberal District Liquor Control

Sale About Feb. 15 Seen; Probably No Limit on Hours.

Regulations which the Commissioners will adopt to enforce the District liquor law will on the whole be extremely liberal, Commissioner George E. Allen predicted last night.

Corporation Counsel William W. Bride and his principal assistant, Vernon E. West, who drafted the liquor bill, started work on the regulations immediately after the Senate passed the commissioners' measure. The task will require several days or a week.

Meanwhile, the commissioners will make their selections of the three members of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, though they will not be announced until after the bill is signed by the President. Although there are numerous candidates, the District heads insist that they have not yet made the selections.

One Probably a Woman.

Allen said that one of the members will in all probability be a woman, though the provision in the bill requiring such an appointment was eliminated by the House as unnecessary. The only woman mentioned so far, and she has made no application for the job, is Mrs. J. Borden Harriman.

The regulations in general, Allen said, will follow the existing regulations covering beer sales. It is probable, however, that the old-fashioned bar, which under the beverage act was converted into a lunch counter, will be definitely banned, he added.

There are not likely to be any restrictions as to the hours of liquor sales, Allen said, but licensees will be kept within a distance of about 200 feet from churches and schools.

Sale About February 15.

No temporary licenses are to be issued. Consequently, liquor probably will not go on sale legally until about the middle of February, as licensees must advertise their applications two weks before the board can aprove them.

As the board can not be named until after the bill becomes a law, and as an organization will have to be set up and forms of applications must be drawn up by the boar,d it appears now that no applications to sell liquor can be received formally for at least a week or ten days.

Bride yesterday disagreed with Commissioner Allen's prediction that "a good quart of liquor" can be bought for $1.50 after the District bill becomes a law. The corporation counsel said the price will be nearer $2.50.

No Clothing, 264 Pupils Miss School

Despite CWA and Other Relief, Figure Gains Over November.

Conditions Not Worse, Miss Bentley Says, Citing Accuracy.

Despite aid being given by the CWA and relief agencies, 53 more children were absent from school during the week ended last Friday, because of lack of clothing, than during a week in November, when the last absentee census was taken by school officials, Superintendent Frank W. Ballou reported to the Board of Education yesterday.

The report revealed that 264 children were absent during the week ended January 12 because of lack of shoes and clothing or both. In the November census, 211 were found to be absent.

Miss Fay L. Bentley, director of school attendance and work permits, who conducted the survey, expressed the opinion that conditions are not "as much worse" as the number of pupils involved would seem to indicate.

The last report, she said, was made on the basis of case investigations by attendance officers, while former ones were based on the opinions of teachers. For this reason, she believes all the cases in the last census included absences due to lack of clothing and shoes, while the others did not.

Of the 264 absentees, 213 were elementary school pupils, 36 junior high, 4 senior high, 5 vocational schools and 6 parochial schools. These 264 pupils missed an aggregate of 1,085 days, as follows: Seven missed 1 day, 47 missed 2 days, 24 missed 3 days, 18 missed 4 days and 168 missed 5 days.

Dr. Ballou expressed concern over the report and said he would have another study made in February. He recommended also that a copy of the report be sent to L. A. Halbert, director of emergency relief for the District; George S. Wilson, director of the Board of Public Welfare; Elwood Street, director of the Community Chest; Dr. Frederic W. Perkins, president of the Washington Council of Social Agencies; Mrs. Joseph N. Saunders, president of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers, and the Rev. Dr. James D. Pair, president of the Federation of Parent-Teacher Associations.

$378,000 Light Rate Reduction Studied Today

Minimum Consumers Not Likely to Share in Cut Effective Feb. 1.

The Public Utilities Commission, which has been engaged in holding a valuation hearing for the Washington Gas Light Co. since the first of November, will pause long enough today to consider the problem of reducing electric rates by $378,000.

Proposed schedules will be submitted by the Potomac Electric Power Co. and probably by members of the commission staff. Decision of the commission doubtless will be withheld several days. The new rates will become effective February 1.

The existing primary rate of 3.9 cents per kilowatt hour is almost certain to be left alone as both the commission and the power company believe that minimum consumers, chiefly of the apartment house class, are well able to pay the minimum bills.

It is likely that the $378,000 will be divided practically half and half between domestic and commercial schedules, probably with an inducement offered larger users of current.

The fund available for rate reductions this year is almost $200,000 under that applied last year, partially because of the transfer in the 3 per cent Federal tax from consumers to the utility last September and because of the addition of capital taxes.

The gas valuation hearing yesterday continued to deal with depreciation. Luther K. Nash, vice president of Stone & Webster, sought to support his theory that obsolete and inadequate equipment should not be figured in depreciation despite a spirited cross-examination by William A. Roberts, special counsel of the commission.

Roberts attempted at one time to introduce the possibility of supplanting the present system with natural gas, but Stoddard M. Stevens, jr., counsel for the gas company, succeeded in barring the topic.

Rotary Club Adjourns, Mourning 2 Members

Washington Rotarians paid tribute yesterday to two members, Henry Wellen Fisher and William John Eynon, who died this week, and then adjourned their meeting.

President Harrison E. Howe called on Charles A. Scott and George W. Harris, who presented resolutions of sorrow.

Shouts Reveal Rail Span Fire

Tender of Potomac Bridge Yells Alarm After Phone Fails.

A strong-lunged bridge guard was credited early yesterday with preventing a disaster.

Shortly after 4 a. m., Alexander Arlen, veteran draw tender on the railroad bridge across the Potomac into Virginia, was sitting alone in his little house atop the span when he saw timbers afire below.

Grabbing a fire extinguisher, Arlen went to combat the blaze, but was handicapped by a high wind. Finding the telephone wires were burned away, he faced the Highway Bridge, nearly a quarter of a mile away, and shouted "Fire!" several minutes.

Convinced he had been heard, Arlen returned to battle the blaze with his extinguisher for a half hour, until the fire boat and harbor police arrived. The blaze was soon extinguished.

Railtraffic was delayed several hours during repairs. Damage was estimated at $500.

Victim Wins Fight With Holdup Man

Struck in the face with a brick by a colored man who attempted to rob him early yesterday, James Cherry, of 1730 V street northwest, battled for possession of his pocketbook, and, shouting for help, succeeded in frightening off his assailant.

Cherry said the man struck him at Eighteenth and Willard streets northwest.

New One-Way Traffic Too Fast, Police Warn District Drivers

22-Mile Limit Will Be Strictly Enforced on Thirteenth Street.

The tendency of motorists to "step up" traffic along Thirteenth street under the new system of one-day during rush periods, yesterday brought warnings from police and traffic officials.

Numerous complaints were received when crosstown motorists and pedestrians found it difficult to weave their way through the speeding lanes of machines. The hazardous situation will increase, many declared, when special details of police, on hand to supervise the new system, are removed.

Inspector B. A. Lamb, commanding the Traffic Bureau, reminded motorists that the speed limit along Thirteenth street remains at 22 miles per hour. This limit, he declared, will be strictly enforced.

Acting Traffic Director, M. O. Eldridge blamed the thoroughfare's traffic light system for the tendency to speed. The long distance between lights, he said, urges the motorists to "step on it."

Policemen are now stationed at 27 intersections during the morning and afternoon rush hours. Officials indicated they could not keep this detail on a permanent basis.

Paramount, Hecht and Lubitsch 'Improve' Coward's Comedy, 'Design for Living'

Little Remains Of Clever Hit In Film Form

Completely Rewritten for Screen; Opera Soon; About Showshops.

Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.

In the old days of "the road" and its perennially popular touring companies, such, for example, as "Uncle Tom's Cabin," "In Old Kentucky," and the like, it was customary, year after year, to lure patrons by the illusory promise that they would find "everything new but the title."

Paramount, with a far more rigid and provable adherence to the truth, might adopt this hoary device in announcing its picturization of Noel Coward's sensationally successful play, "Design for Living."

Screened yesterday afternoon in the private projection room of the Fox Film Exchange for the benefit of the dramatic desks of the local press, "Design for Living," as it has been transmuted into celluloid, proved itself a work utterly apart from the Coward play with which Washington is familiar from its original presentation here with Lynn Fontaine, Alfred Lunt and the author in the principal roles and its subsequent interpretation by Mr. Stephen E. Cochran's "guest star" company, headed by Corinne Griffith, also at the National.

Rewritten, By Hecht!

Paramount has long boasted that Ben Hecht had greatly "improved" Noel Coward's play by completely rewriting it for Ernst Lubitsch's direction, with the retension only of the character name of Gilda and the toast, "To our immortal souls," from the original work.

That literally is all that remains in any recognizable form of the Coward conception of what might happen to three people "who loved each other very much."

In the film version, Leo, the playwright, becomes Tom Chambers; Otto, the painter, becomes George Curtis, and the obscure little man to whom Gilda finally was married, only to desert him when her two old cronies showed up again from China, is now an energetic and slightly eccentric young advertising executive by the name of Max Plunkett.

There is, to be sure, a vague shadow of the former motif of the play that occasionally obtrudes itself diffidently, but the zest, the sparkle and the daring of the Coward treatment have very largely disappeared. In their place are humor of a wholly different flavor, wisecracks to supplant the keenest of satire and obvious situations to suffice for the startling surprises in which "Design for Living" originally abounded.

The Present Stars.

Miriam Hopkins appears in the role which bears the same character name as that created by Lynn Fontanne, although there the resemblance may be said to end. Gary Cooper appears as George Curtis, the former Otto part, played by Alfred Lunt, and Fredric March is the Noel Coward character, Leo, renamed Tom Chambers. Edward Everett Horton is the entirely new creation who marries Miss Hopkins and meets the same fate as his predecessor, although by wholly different means and under completely different circumstances.

Mr. Coward applauded the American-made picturization of his "Cavalcade"—placed first in the recent National vote for the ten best pictures of the year—because it reproduced his stage spectacle with such minute fidelity. Mr. Coward will not be stimulated to any such enthusiasm by the camera version of his "Design for Living," or, at least, not for the same reason. Indeed, it is doubtful if he will even recognize it as anything with which he has ever been in the remotest degree connected.

"Design for Living" will follow the current engagement of Eddie Cantor in "Roman Scandals" at Loew's Palace, at which time it will be comprehensively reviewed in this space.

Upon the occasion of his Mediterranean traveltalk in the National Theater yesterday afternoon, Burton Holmes made known that his next lecture, "Motoring Through Java," scheduled for the National next Tuesday, January 23, will not begin until 4:40 p. m., instead of at 4 as has been the case with his first two illustrated talks in the series of five. In view of the large number of persons in Government service, this is a change that will be preponderantly on the side of public convenience.

"Long Time No See!"

A long-absent caller at the dramatic desk yesterday afternoon was our old friend, Ralph Edmunds, originally a grand opera impresario, later an exploiteer de luxe of motion picture enterprises, with headquarters in the Capital, and still later, first program manager for Broadcasting Station WRC in this city.

It was Mr. Edmunds under whose auspices we presided as a sort of panjandrum of the old Crandall Saturday Nighters, back in the days when radio programs were in their infancy and we could begin a program at 10:30 p. m. and end it anywhere from 1 to 2:30 a. m., or later, provided we had talent enough to keep going. Heigh-ho!

But Mr. Edmunds, long since, has returned to his first love and is in Washington as a happy harbinger of the San Carlo Grand Opera Company, soon to be heard in a week of operatic repertoire at the National.

First "Madam Butterfly."

In this connection, Ralph recalled yesterday that it was he who produced the first "Madam Butterfly" ever presented in this country, for the late Henry W. Savage. With Puccini himself, Mr. Edmunds journeyed from Italy to Budapest to hear the soprano who eventually was brought to this country to sing the title role in English—a tongue which she did not speak, but which she learned like a parrot for the purposes of this single role.

The first performance of "Madam Butterfly" was presented in the Columbia Theater—the same Columbia Theater exactly that is now known as Loew's Columbia, dedicated to the cinema, but then a Klaw and Erlanger house, like the National—back in 1906 and scored an instantaneous hit. It went directly into the Garden Theater in New York and established a record for length of run.

Miss Farrar Thought Not.

During the New York engagement, Geraldine Farrar frequently stopped in to hear it and finally stated that, much as she had been attracted to the role in the beginning, the more she contemplated it, the less she liked it and the surer she was that it was nothing in which she could ever appear with any distinction either to herself or the Puccini score, with its tremendously popular "One Fine Day" aria.

As was subsequently revealed, once Farrar had sung the role, there was no keeping her out of it.

"Madam Butterfly," by the way, will be the second bill of the San Carlo Company at the National the week of January 29.

It's not such a large world, at that.

By some inexplicable dropping of a line, the name of Arnold Korff did not appear in yesterday's review of "Biography," starring Ina Claire, at the National, in the paragraph devoted to a brief appreciation of the excellence of his portrayal of the role of Melchior Feydak, the Viennese composer, who in the end extricates Marion Froude, played by Miss Claire, from all her difficulties. Mr. Korff is too fine an actor not to be definitely known for one of his most facile and most sympathetic performances.

Voice From Wilderness.

Thanks to the cooperative effort of his comrades in the Civilian Conservation Camp, Milton Munson, today contemplates a promising professional career.

Some months ago, Milton was regaling his buddies in a C. C. C. camp in northern Michigan with vocal entertainment that they deemed worthy of a stage hearing—an ambition that Master Munson long had secretly nurtured. There being no available funds with which to make the trip and attempt an audition, the boys in the camp made up a jackpot and hustled Milton off to Chicago, with official sanction, of course.

In Chicago, in time, he managed an audition for Buddy Rogers and a place was made for him in the unit which comes as the headline attraction to the stage of Loew's Fox on Friday.

Buddy wires the local Fox management from Baltimore that Munson has been "clicking' at every performance and that his future on the stage seems assured.

We shall see, come Friday.

When "Girl Without a Room" opens today at the Metropolitan—and it DOES open today at the Metropolitan—habitual picturegoers will probably rub their eyes and wonder if that is really Marguerite Churchill they are watching up there on the screen. Miss Churchill, as you might say, has undergone a complete and startling metamorphosis. From an ingenuous and more or less shrinking violet type, she has emerged into a siren of assurance, warmth and color. Her physical transformation is no less astonishing than that which has overtaken her tempermentally. She has undergone as thorough a transmogrification as Mae Clarke recently experienced, much to the surprise and chagrin of those who thought they knew her and her capabilities best. Miss Churchill, in short, will probably knock your eye out!

Over-Training Item.

Edna May Oliver, stage luminary and star of RKO-Radio pictures, is said to own a piano for which she paid $900 and which has cost her $14,100 in freight charges, carting it around the country with her.

Covered by notes, no doubt!

Bert with his apple, Dorothy with her script and Bob with his cigar did not pose intentionally for this picture—in fact, they probably didn't know it was being taken, but here it is and there they are!

40 in Prince Georges To Rush CWA Work

Forty men are expected to be at work by tomorrow on the Prince Georges County unit of the CWA community sanitation project, it was announced yesterday at the office of Dr. A. B. Hooton, county health officer.

The work now is being carried on at Upper Marlboro and Hyattsville. A project at Clinton, Md., has recently been completed.

Capital-Bound Man Collapses; Shenandoah Seeking His Kin

Strasburg, Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.).—Shenandoah County officials today were endeavoring to locate relatives of a man giving the name of Joseph Kennedy, who fainted on the street here yesterday after insisting that he be let off the train at Strasburg Junction, although he had purchased a ticket from New Market, Va., to Washington, D. C.

Trainmaster R. C. Bittle and Road Supervisor J. M. Boles, sr., of the Southern Railway, declared that soon after the man, who appears to be in his twenties, boarded the train at New Market, he requested that he be let off at Strasburg Junction. The trainmen acquiesced.

Alighting at Strasburg Junction, Kennedy walked a short distance to the main street of Strasburg, where he collapsed. Dr. C. H. Spiggle, railway physician, found the man to be suffering from a head abscess.

Kennedy refused to talk about himself. He declared he had a sister in Baltimore. He was turned over to Shenandoah County authorities for investigation.

Kennedy, officers said they learned, was brought to the railway station at New Market by two well-dressed men who purchased his ticket.

Girl's Poison Death Is Termed Suicide

Danville Mill Worker Denies Implication.

Danville, Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.).—Coroner Joseph E. Taylor rendered a verdict of suicide tonight in the case of Miss Nancy McDowell, 24, who died last night after being found contorted with pain in a room at the Hotel Caldwell, with a bottle of poison on the floor.

Police aided the coroner in developing the circumstances, Taylor delaying his verdict for half a day.

Dorsey Jordan, mill worker, occupying a room adjoining that of Miss McDowell, was arrested for intoxication. He made a statement to police in which he contended that the woman took the poison without his knowledge.

Rail Bridge Crash Hurts 10 Workers

Covington, Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.).—Ten men were injured today when a derrick and flat car plunged into Potts Creek, five miles south of Covington, when a bridge collapsed as the men were removing rails from the abandoned Potts Creek branch of the C. & O. Railway.

The men were taken to a hospital at Clifton Forge. All except W. T. Fridley, of Lowmoor, who received a crushed chest, are expected to recover.

H. W. Garland Buried.

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.). Herbert W. Garland, who died Monday at Jacksonville, Fla., was buried here today. His father, two sisters, Mrs. L. A. Wehrle and Mrs. J. L. Shrier, and a brother, Henry E. Garland, of Washington, survive.

Ashes at Rest

Remains of Authoress Put in Crisfield Library.

Crisfield, Md., Jan. 17 (AP).—In a niche over the shelves containing the books she had written, today reposed the ashes of Mrs. Lilyan Stratton Corbin, Crisfield author, in whose memory her husband built the library here.

The urn containing the ashes was presented to the library association at an impressive ceremony last night by her husband, Alfred C. Corbin, New York banker, Mrs. Corbin was killed in an automobile accident five years ago.

The Rev. John J. Bunting, pastor of Immanuel Methodist Episcopal Church here, and Mrs. Lorie C. Quinn, sr., president of the library association, gave short addresses.

Carnera Says He'll Floor Loughran

Declares Feb. 22 Foe in Miami Is Too Little and Too Light.

Will Go to Health Camp Today and Leave for Florida Monday.

NEW YORK, Jan. 17 (U.P.).—Primo Carnera, looking more civilized with each Atlantic crossing, ambled down the gangplank of the Conte di Savoia today, grinned his toothsome grin for the photographers, and then predicted he would knock out Tommy Loughran when he defends his world's heavyweight championship against the Philadelphian at Miami, on February 22.

"Tommy Loughran is a very nice boy," Carnera said as the customs men began rooting through his trunks, "but I will beat him down. He is too little, too light, and he could not hurt me if he hit me all day. I know I'm right, because I have seen him fight three fights—one against Sharkey, one against Levinsky and one against poor Schaaf. Our fight is scheduled for 15 rounds, but he'll be lucky to stay with me 10."

Too Smart, Say Aids.

Supporting Carnera's prediction that Loughran wouldn't last long were two American sparring mates, Arthur Huttick and Harold Mays. They boxed six rounds with Carnera every day of the crossing, and both agreed that the Italian champion was too big, too strong and too smart for anybody fighting today.

"He hits like a horse," said Huttick.

"He hits harder than that," said Mays, who is the young man Gene Tunney once named as the coming champion of the world.

Certainly Carnera is bigger, if not better, than ever. He weighs 272 pounds, the result of much banqueting with his admirers in Italy. Fifteen pounds of this excess suet must be taken off, for his best fighting weight is around 257. He will waste no time in starting the removal of the surplus poundage, for tomorrow will find him at Dr. Bier's Health Camp at Pompton Lakes, N. J., running the roads. He will remain there until Monday and then depart for Miami. His American manager, Bill Duffy, leaves for Florida to arrange for a training camp site.

Much Time Dancing.

Carnera, it was learned, spent much of his time on the crossing in the ballroom dancing. His favorite partner was a Palm Beach debutante, who, because of ballet training, was able to avoid stepping on the canal barges that he laughingly calls his feet. Asked if he was as accomplished a dancer as Max Baer, Primo replied:

"No, he's ahead of me in that, but he's also ahead of me in lawsuits."

Carnera expressed regret that Madison Square Garden had been unable to arrange for meeting with Baer here in June.

Staunton Lists Ring, Court and Tank Dates

Staunton, Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.).—Staunton Military Academy's basket ball, boxing and swimming schedules were released here today. The basket ball schedule is one of the most difficult, as well as the most representative, ever attempted by the school. It includes the Emerson Institute team from Washington and the yearlings of both V. M. I. and Virginia. Germantown Academy is listed on a projected Pennsylvania trip, with Trenton (N. J.) High pending, and a possible additional game on the same route.

In boxing, the "prep" school opponents are Armstrong and Augusta Military. First year teams from V. M. I., Virginia, Washington and Lee, and the Navy make up the rest of the regular schedule, which ends with the South Atlantic tournament.

Two swimming meets are scheduled with Augusta and the W. and L. fresh, one each with Massanutton, the Virginia freshmen, and the Mercersburg Academy of Pennsylvania.

The schedules follows:

Basket ball—Jnauary 17, V. M. I. Freshmen, home; 20, V. E. S., home; 27, Woodberry Forest, home; 30, Charlottesville School for Boys, home. February 1, Emerson, home; 2, Fishburne, away; 3, Westchester (N. Y.) Military Academy, home; 6, Randolph-Macon, away; 7, Augusta, home; 9, Woodberry Forest, away; 10, Fork Union, away; 12, Virginia Freshmen, away; 13, Massanutten, away; 16, Fork Union, home; 17, Fishburne, home; 20, Massanutten, home; 21, Randolph-Macon, home; 24, Germantown Academy, away; 26, Augusta, away. March 2 and 3, South Atlantic tournament, Washington and Lee.

Boxing—January 20, Armstrong, Junior College, home. February 2, W. and L. Freshmen, away; 10, Virginia Freshmen, away; 17, Navy Plebes, away; 24, Augusta, home. March 3, V. M. I. Freshmen, home; 9 and 10, South Atlantic tournament, at Augusta Military Academy.

Swimming—January 20, Massanutten Military Junior Varsity, home (tentative); 27, Mercersburg Academy, home. February 3, Augusta, away; 7, Virginia Freshmen, home; 13, W. and L. Freshmen, away; 16, W. and L. Freshmen, home; 24, Augusta, home.

Willow Tree Noses Out Dunbar High, 33 to 30

Breaking a tie in the last minute of play, Willow Tree Athletic Club defeated Dunbar High yesterday in the latter's gymnasium, 33 to 30. Tabbs and Butler, with 10 and 8 points, respectively, starred for the victors, while Plummer, with 12 points, was outstanding for Dunbar.

Godwin-Walker To Clash Jan. 29

West Palm Beach, Fla., Jan. 17 (U.P.).—Mickey Walker, former light-heavyweight champion, and Bob Godwin, Adel, Ga., boxer, have been signed for a 10-round bout here on January 29, Bob Moore, matchmaker for the Dixie Highway Arena, announced today.

Godwin won a referee's decision over Maxie Rosenbloom, light-heavyweight title holder, in a nontitle bout here last week and is pointing for a title match with Rosenbloom.

C.U. Gridmen In 9 Games Next Fall

Holy Cross, Manhattan, Duquesne, Western Md. Scheduled.

GAMES with Holy Cross, Manhattan, Western Maryland and Duquesne feature Catholic University's 1934 football schedule, announced last night by Arthur J. Bergman, director of athletics. The team will play nine games, seven of them booked, another pending, and still another to be announced at a later date.

The Cardinals plan to open their campaign September 29, playing a smaller college in this vicinity. It will make its annual pilgrimage to Worcester for a tussle with Holy Cross October 13. Chick Meehan's Manhattan machine will be met two weeks later in New York, and these two games are the only ones away from home.

Western Maryland Here.

Western Maryland will be featured here November 2, followed by Oglethorpe, a newcomer to the Brooklanders' schedule. Either South Dakota State or the University of South Dakota will be played the following week, and Duquesne will furnish the opposition in a grand finale on November 23.

St. John's, of Annapolis, Chattanooga, Wake Forest and Detroit have been dropped from the list, but there is a possibility that the latter two clubs will be on the 1935 schedule. The complete card follows:

September 29, open.
October 6, La Salle, here; 13, Holy Cross, at Worcester; 20, Baltimore U., here; 27, Manhattan, at New York.
November 2, Western Maryland, here; 9, Oglethorpe, here; 16, South Dakota State or U. of South Dakota (pending); 23, Duquesne, here.

Weaver, of Nats, Signs for Season

Writes His Arm Feels Fine; Looks for Good Year.

Monte Weaver, the dignified and deep thinking former math professor at University of Virginia, who discovered that he could make more money curving baseballs than figuring out the whys and wherefors in calculus, yesterday sent in his signed 1934 contract to Clark Griffith, president of the Nats.

Weaver, one of the few Nats to get a salary boost last season, did not get an increase this season, Griffith stated, this being the only information he would give out on the subject of terms.

Monte had trouble with his salary wing during much of the 1933 season, yet despite this he took part in 23 games, won 10 and lost 5, and finished ninth in the league in effectiveness. Foes averaged but 3.26 earned runs per game from his offerings. He pitched one of his best games of the season while losing a heart-breaker in the fourth fracas of the world series with the Giants.

The Professor writes that he has been taking a long rest, that his arm feels great and that he hopes to flash a return of his 1932 form during the coming season.

Hockey Player, Well, Quits Boston Hospital

Boston, Jan. 17 (U.P.).—Irvin ("Ace") Bailey, Toronto Maple Leafs hockey star left Boston Ctiy Hospital today, for Toronto, fully recovered from injuries he suffered in a game here December 12 with the Boston Bruins. To avoid a crowd at South Station, he boarded the Toronto train at Newtonville with his wife, 4-year-old daughter and mother-in-law.

His recovery, remarkable in the annals of brain surgery, will leave him "completely normal," according to physicians at City Hospital where two delicate operations were performed to bring him back from the point of death.

Sing Sing Grid Star Thrown For 6-Mile Loss by Trooper

OSSINING, N. Y., Jan. 17 (A.P.).—Edward Jocker's "contract" with the Sing Sing Prison football team will run a year longer than he had expected.

Walking off from his job as a dishwasher in the home of Warden Lewis E. Lawes last evening will account for what might be classed as a violation of the "eligibility rule" for the 27-year-old stellar prison football end. The warden's home is outside the walls of the prison.

Jocker had only two more years of a seven-year term to serve. He was missed after the first inspection last night and a short time later was thrown for 6-mile loss by a State trooper who saw him running along the highway. An extra year will be tacked onto the sentence because of the escape.

Blaik Named Dartmouth's Grid Coach

33-Year-Old Tradition Broken as Outsider Succeeds Connell.

NEW YORK, Jan. 17 (AP).—Breaking a tradition that has stood for 33 years, Dartmouth today cast aside its graduate football coaching system by selecting, as its new head coach, Eearl Henry (Red) Blaik, for the last seven years the back-field coach and acknowledged "master mind" of West Point's gridiron forces.

Simultaneous atnnouncement was made by the Dartmouth Athletic Council at Hanover, N. H., and New York, that Blaik has been signed to a two-year contract, along with Harry O. (Fats) Ellinger, Army's noted line coach, and Andrew Gustafson, of Pittsburgh, one of Jack Sutherland's aids, as back-field coach.

Reshapes Its Policy.

Thus the big green outfit of the White Mountains, after canvassing a long list of candidates for weeks, has reshaped its gridiron policy for the first time since 1901 and entrusted its football for 1934-35 to a brand new board of strategy. Blaik succeeds Jackson L. Cannell, former Dartmouth quarterback, who has been coach for the past five years an dthe last of a long line of noted graduate coaches, including the late Maj. Frank Cavanaugh, Clarence (Fat) Spears and Jesse Hawley.

Cannell's contract has one more year to run, but he resigned, under pressure, soon after the close of the 1933 season, one of the worst Dartmouth has had in a long time on the gridiron. The Green eleven beat Pennsylvania and tied Harvard, but dropped its last four successive games to Yale, Princeton, Cornell and Chicago. The team's rout at Chicago, by 39 to 0, touched off a blast of criticism featured by undergraduate demands for Cannell's scalp.

Major Coaching "Plum."

Football observers consider Dartmouth has now picked off one of the East's major coaching "plums" by signing Blaik and Ellinger. To them has been credited much of West Point's success in football under the regime of the three head coaching officers, "Biff" Jones, Ralph Sasse and "Gar" Davidson, who took over the job last year. Davidson paid tribute to his departing aidsh today as follows: "I consider Red Blaik one of the finest football strategists in the game and Harry Ellinger the best line coach in the country."

Blaik and Ellinger were stars on Army teams, the former graduating with high honors in 1920 and the latter in 1925. Subsequently both left the service. At West Point they have been under contract as civilian coaches. Both repeatedly have turned down flattering offers to leave West Point. Until recently, when Dartmouth entered the picture and the bidding, they were mentioned for coaching jobs at Ohio State and Yale.

Blaik was reliably reported to have been paid a colonel's salary, approximately $4,000, for his football work at West Point. The probability is he will get at least double this amount at Dartmouth.

G. U. Prep Five 21-20 Victor Over Tech

Nee's Free Toss Decisive in Poorly Played Game on Tech's Floor.

GEORGETOWN PREP fought an uphill basket ball game yesterday to nose out McKinley Tech on the latter's floor, 21-20.

Both teams displayed a brand of ball that resembled a first day's practice session and the game finally wound up with the winner gaining the verdict with a charity heave in the last minute of play.

With the score tied at 20-all, Maury Nee came through with the foul shot and, following a short scrimmage in the center of the floor, the game ended.

Tech, suffering the pangs of defeat at the hands of Central yesterday, and Georgetown, unskilled in the play of the large Tech floor, threw scoring plays out of bounds, passed into the arms of opponents, and missed baskets by yartis in the drab, listless embroglio.

Tech Leads at Half.

Tech opened the scoring with Al Gillem denting the Georgetown basket with a field goal. The Hoyettes tied the count with a pair of fouls and, from that point on, the score zigzagged back and forth, with the first quarter ending, 9-7, in Tech's favor. The Maroon and Gray held the advantage throughout the second and third period, with the count at the half reading, 14-11.

Starting the fourth stanza, Nee dumped a goal to bring the Garrett Parkers only one point behind the Techs. Keating added another basket a while later, shooting Georgetown into the lead, 19-18. Nee's foul shot was good, but Gillem came back to tie the count at 20-all with a minute to go. Then Nee sank another free toss and Tech was beaten.

Eastern Tossers Trounce Gonzaga

Gain Early Lead and Always Show Way to Win, 45-29.

Eastern High School trained its high scoring guns on Gonzaga Prep School yesterday and trounced the Purple, 45 to 29.

The Lincoln Parkers presented a juggled line-up, with Edelin at forward and McCarthy and Bassin at the guard posts. Eastern took an early lead and was never headed, holding at 26-to-11 lead at the half.

Tom Folliard, Gonzaga forward, and Tom Davis, Eastern center, divided the scoring homers of their respective teams, with 11 points each. Tommy Nolan and Harry Edelin were close behind jn points for Eastern, with 10 each.

It's "Col. Klein" Now, Gov. Laffoon Decrees

Louisville, Ky., Jan. 17 (U.P.). Chuck Klein, Chicago Cubs' outfielder, had the title of "colonel" bestowed on him today by Gov. Ruby Laffoon.

A scroll will be formally presented to Klein at Indianapolis Friday by State Representative Richard H. Nufer, Louisville.

Twin Feature Mat Program For Tonight

Zarynoff Faces Grobmier, Zelesniak to Battle Ernie Dusek.

NEW faces, and some only slightly used here, will be blended together in making up tonight's rassle card at the Auditorium, and enough types of performers will do their stuff to whet the appetites of every type of fan. Gaining the services of growlers of all leagues as a result of his recent declaration of independence, and also because of the apparent armistice effected by practically all of the big-time booking agencies, Promoter Joe Turner steps out tonight with a high-calibered card, gathered from all parts of the rassling world.

Instead of one feature being listed, two have been arranged, while any one of the three curtail-raisers could steal the show, especially that which pits Ray Steele, one of the leading title challengers, against Joe Malcewicz, a cagey, powerful veteran, who has been smart enough to add the tricks of rassling to those he already knew about wrestling.

Main Bouts Differ.

In one of tonight's top bouts, Count Zarynoff, the bald-headed Ukrainian, meets Fred Grobmier, while the other calls for Vanka Zelesniak, who has so much hair that it grows several inches long all over his face, to exchange holds and whatever rasslers exchange with Ernie Dusek. Both of these settos are promising. Zarynoff will pit his science and acrobatic ability against Grobmier's figure-four scissors in the one, while in the other it will be a case of Dusek trying to wear down his much more powerful, but less aggressive and scientific foe.

A couple of the mat game's boy wonders earn a piece of change in the other bouts carded, but not against each other. Paul Boesch, popular here, gets one of the big tests of his comparatively short career against Dick Shikat, former title claimant, while Vic Christy, equally as well liked by local cash customers, will take on snarling Little Beaver. The latter, a red man, is still a little green at rassling, but he is of the villian type and this adds to his color.

All in all, it smacks of a good card.

Pro 9 Under Par At Santa Monica

McSpaden Shoots 62 and Wins Driving Contest.

Santa Monica, Calif., Jan. 17 (AP). Shooting one of his greatest competitive rounds, Harold McSpaden, of the Quivera Lake Golf Club, Kansas City, Kans., turned in a 62 individual card today to win the Santa Monica amateur-pro championship.

McSpaden's amazing score for the 6,151-yard clover field municipal course, plus the contribution of a stroke by his amateur partner, Dan Erickson, Los Angeles public links player, gave them a 61 to win the title, 10 strokes better than par. Victory gave to McSpanden $200.

After his remarkable round, the 25-year-old Jayhawker stepped over to the first tee and won the driving contest, an additional feature of the tournament, to pick up $400 more prize money.

His best individual drive was 301 yards and his average for three balls was 278 yards, 1 foot, 8 inches.

Hubbell Signs With Giants At $18,000; Raise of $5,000

NEW YORK, Jan. 17 (U.P.).—Carl Hubbell, currently the greatest major league pitcher, today returned his signed 1934 player contract to the New York Giants. Jim Tierney, secretary of the Giants, would not divulge Hubbell's salary, but baseball men believed he had been raised from the $13,000 for 1933 to $18,000.

Hubbell's pitching prowess was the main factor in the Giants' National League championship and in the winning of the world series with the Washington Nationals. During the season he won 23 games and lost 12. He led National League pitchers in having the lowest average of 1.66 runs earned per nine-inning game. This was the lowest average since Grover Cleveland Alexander, of Philadelphia, led National tossers with 1.55 in 1916. Hubbell also pitched the most innings, 309; pitched most shutouts, 10, and his 23 victories topped all his contemporaries.

He was the only 1933 world series pitcher to pitch two complete games. He won both. He also pitched the most series innings, 20; had the most strikeouts, 15, and most bases on balls, 6.

Baer Loses Fight To Oust Managers

Hoffman, Lorimer Can Not Be Discharged, Ruling.

San Francisco, Jan. 17 (AP).—Max Baer lost another court fight today in his efforts to rid himself of a couple of managers, the State supreme court ruling the actor-boxer had no right to discharge Ancil Hoffman and J. H. Lorimer. The fighter, October 6, 1930, entered into a contract with Lorimer and Hoffman in which they were to manage him and operate on a 50-50 basis, Baer getting half the profits and the two managers splitting the rest.

The contract was to continue to February 29, 1936, with an option for a five-year extension if Baer was paid $5,000. The half-and-half division of profits was to be effective except in States where the laws prevented it.

Baer notified his managers, November 12, 1931, that he wanted to cancel the contract, giving 13 reasons, alleging various violations of contract, including the charge that the 50-50 division of profits was in violation of the California boxing law.

Grimm on Spot; Has All Men He Wanted

Says Klein Will Provide Punch; Hermans Due for Comeback.

CHICAGO, Jan. 17 (U.P.).—Unless the Chicago Cubs win the National League pennant next season, Manager Charlie Grimm is going to find himself in a very tough spot indeed.

"We've go to win the pennant," Grimm confessed today when he appeared at the Cub's offices for an interview with the club's new president, William M. Alker.

"You see, at the end of last season Mr. Walker asked me what players I wanted to obtain for the 1934 season. I told him and he went out and got them. After the major league meeting here in December he asked me if I was satisfied with the club as it stood and I told him I was.

"So, it's now up to me to win the pennant. I take the blame for our failure to win last year. We didn't have quite enough hustle. But this year I am going to demand that every player hustle for all he's worth at home and on the road. Any player who fails to hustle will soon find himself on the bench."

Grimm expects the addition of Chuck Klein to give the Cubs the punch they lacked at bat last year. Klein will bat in No. 3 position, the same spot he occupied with the Phillies, Grimm said.

Comebacks are expected from the two Hermans, Babe and Billy, by Grimm.

Borries Tops Attack With 14 Points

Slow, Listless Contest Is Marred by Fouls; 3 Men Ejected.

Midshipmen Pull Away After Being Held to 13 to 7 at Half.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Jan. 17 (Spl.).—Navy's small but speedy courtmen ran roughshod over Georgetown in a rough game here this afternoon, winning, 33 to 18, before a throng of 2,500 fans. It was a slow, listless affair, almost entirely devoid of thrills.

Georgetown was decidedly off-color, and Navy took advantage of the Hoyas' inaptitude to roll up a commanding lead in the first half and was never headed. Frequent fouls marred play, and Tommy Carolan, Georgetown, and Dornan and Rankin, of the Middies, were ejected from the fray via the four-fouls route.

Ten minutes elapsed before Ed Hargaden sank Georgetown's first field goal, and Navy by that time had 7 points. A foul by Joe Corliss and two pot shots by Carolan boosted Georgetown's score to 7 points—all it got in the first half. Mandelkorn, Borries and Badger collected 13 for the home team.

Quickly Runs Up Score.

Navy got down to serious business in the second half and quickly prodded its score up to 27 on a trio of buckets by Borries, aided by Decker, Rankin and Badger. Hargaden, who played a beautiful floor game, interrupted the runaway long enough to sink two long pot shots and a foul, O'Connor came through with a field goal, and Hargaden sank a snowbird before Navy applied the pressure.

Georgetown found the Navy baskets emtremely "stiff" and consequently missed numerous long shots. Fred Mesmer's charges looked particularly bad on fouls, making good only twice in 17 attempts. O'Connor missed eight tries, and Hargaden six in seven. Navy converted 5 of its 11 chances from the charity mark.

Borries Navy Star.

Hargaden's smooth handling of the leather gave him first claim to the individual honors for the afternoon, but "Buz" Borries was a close second, leading the Middies to victory with 14 points.

Georgetown does not swing into action again, until Saturday night, when it meets Temple in an Eastern Intercollegiate Conference game at Tech High School, Washington.

Swink, Allen Named Augusta Co-Captains

Fort Definace, Va., Jan. 16 (Spl.). At a meeting of the players today, Frank Swink, Lexington, and Stuart Allen, Staunton, were elected co-captains of the Augusta Military Academy basket ball team for this season. At the same time, Grover Cleveland Starbuck, Staunton, was appointed manager.

The Cadets will embark on a heavy 13-game schedule opening with Shenandoah College at Dayton, Friday night. Other outstanding games have been carded with Western High School of Washington, Greenbriar Military Academy, Fishburne, Woodberry Forest and Staunton.

The schedule:

January 19, Shenandoah College, Dayton; 26, Westchester High, home; 27, V. R., S., Lynchburg.
February 3, Woodberry Forest, home; 6, Washington and Lee Frosh, home; 7, Staunton Military Academy, Staunton; 13, Fishburne Military School, home; 17, Western High, home; 19, Greenbriar Military Academy, home; 20, Fishburne Military School, Waynesboro; 23, Elizabethtown High, home; 26, Woodberry Forest, Orange; 28, Staunton Military Academy, home.

All Boys Club Team Faces Swimming Test

The All Boys Club swimming team, composed of swimmers from the Georgetown, Northeast and Washington Boys Clubs, is preparing for its first test against the Y. M. C. A. Juniors swimming team, to be held in Shoreham Pool, Saturday, January 27.

The team practices daily in the Jewish Community Center Pool. The next workout is scheduled there for Monday, at 7 p. m.

Harris on WOL Tonight.

Stanley R. (Bucky) Harris, former Washington Club and Detroit manager and now skipper of the up-and-coming Boston Red Sox, will be guest speaker over Station WOL's weekly broadcast tonight. He will discuss the prospects of Boston and other subjects.

Aunt Flor Triumphs by Half-Length in Thriller at Tropical, Paying $40.90

Victor Makes Spurt Good At Finish

Passes Black Harmony; Croon in Third Place, Never Far Back.

Energetic Boy, Playful Martha Triumphant at Long Odds.

TROPICAL PARK, Jan. 17 (AP).—Favorites continued to meet with rough treatment here today. The Fort Lauderdale, 5½-furlong feature attraction, proved no exception, for the Middleburg Stable's Aunt Flor, paying $40.90, was up to triumph by a half length in a thrilling finish. Mrs. J. H. Whitney's Black Harmony, placed on the outside after acting badly at the post, saved second money by a length from Mrs. K. Jesberger's Croon. The time was 1:06 flat.

Distinguished visitors again were the guests of the Gables Course. Joseph E. Widner, guiding spirit of Hialeah Park, was introduced from the steward's stand, as also was James E. Van Zandt, commander in chief of the veterans of foreign wars. The commander presented a trophy to Trainer Clyde Phillips, who saddled Aunt Flor.

Croon Favorite.

Three horses had rough journeys, they being Mervin B, Davoc and Croon, the latter favorite in the field of ten 3-year-olds. Black Harmony got a step at it when the start came, but Macadam rushed past him and opened up two lengths advantage. The filly's stay was short-lived, however, for she faltered badly turning for home, as did Fair Joan, and Black Harmony again assumed command. Aunt Flor, outrun early, came around the leaders with a rush and responding gamely to Joe Renick's strong urging in the final drive, passed Black Harmony a few yards from the finish. Croon never was far back despite interference.

A poor start marred the curtain raiser, but favorite players had no squawk coming. Jim Crawford, paying $3.30, beat the gate by at least 2 lengths after delaying the start more than 6 minutes. Nothing could get close to the choice and he cantered home by 5 lengths. Earle Maxwell, second all the way, barely held on to save the place from the fast closing Moon Side.

Energetic Boy Wins.

Energetic Boy returned to winning form in the second event, to the discomfiture of the many who backed Earl Porter's mount, Making Bubbles. The latter was unable to catch up with the flying long shot, which greeted the judges with 3 lengths of daylight at $26.80 for $2. Deferred was third, nearly 2 lengths back of Making Bubbles.

The crowd witnessed a great riding duel between the two crack jockeys, Porter and Coucci, in the third. The former's mount, Hasty Peter, nosed out Happy Scot, a slight favorite over the winner. Lucky Jack lasted for the show, 2 spans away. Happy Scot and Hasty Peter dominated most of the running, with the latter having the more left for a bitter drive through the last furlong. He returned $7.80.

The Tout Triumphs.

Gibby's Choice fell down badly in the role of favorite for the fourth event, due partly to a poorly judged ride by Balaski. The Tout proved an easy winner, defeating Grayback by a length and a half. Gibby's Choice was beaten a head for the place. The latter got to the front after entering the back stretch, but The Tout was fortunate to be allowed a hole to come through on the inside. Balaski let Gibby's Choice drop back as The Tout and Grayback fought for command. The choice again moved up turning for home, but faltered in the final drive. The Tout was a 5 to 1 shot.

The stewards ordered Carvel Hall scratched upon report of the track "vet" that the gelding was unfit to race.

Playful Martha, $44.50! The favorite not in the money. That was the sad story in the sixth contest. Little Francis Maschek brought Playful Martha from far out of it to take command in the stretch and the filly just lasted to beat Rego by a snout. The Bailiff was third, three lengths farther back. Eurydice, heavily backed, never was able to reach the leaders.

Oliver Cromwell, famous English statesman, died in 1658, and was buried in the South Chapel of Westminster Abbey. His body was taken up three years later and thrown into a pit at Tyburn, with the exception of the head, which was set on a pinnacle of Westminster Hall.

The famous man's skull remained there for more than 30 years, until it was finally blown down by the wind.

Catherine II, of Russia, in a trip through Crimea in 1787, was the victim of one of the greatest frauds ever staged for a ruler. The trip was a prosperity tour through a land where there was no prosperity, and to mislead their ruler, Catherine's ministers erected portable villages through which she passed. These were torn down after she passed, and sent along ahead to be rebuilt for her farther down the line.

Along the Volga River false fronts were put up to give the appearance of well-kept villages along the banks. Cattle herds were driven from miles around to graze within sight of Catherine.

Old-time kings of Hawaii enjoyed all the sport of toboganning, and at the same time enjoyed the advantages of warm weather, by having their subjects build up strawlined slides for them. The straw was oiled to make it slippery, and to make warm weather tobogganing almost as fast as that in cold climates.

Landon Prep Tossers Downd Bethesda-C. C.

The Landon School defeated Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School on the Episcopal floor yesterday afternoon in an overtime battle, 21-18.

The Landon team, led by Becker and Slaughter, went into an early lead that brought the count to 9-5 in its favor at the second half. However, Bethesda-Chevy Chase turned on the steam in the second half to close the scoring gap and, when the regulation 40 minutes were ended, the score was 17-all.

In the 5-minute overtime, a pair of well placed shots accounted for the Landon margin.

Stoll's, Boys Club To Play Double Bill

Stoll's Cafemen and Boys Club varsity will pair off in another double-header basket ball attraction at the Boys Club tomorrow night, formidable opposition being listed in each instance.

At 9 o'clock the crack Camp Meade Tank Corps contingent, of Camp Meade, Md., back the Shollmen. Boys Club mingles with St. John's Cadets at 8.

Potomac State Wins.

Keyser, W. Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.).—Scoring a total of 26 field goals, Potomac State College's quintet easily defeated Frostburg State Normal School here, 63-21. Coach Stagger's crew led from start to finish, the quarter scores being 20-6, 31-10 and 47-15.

At the Post . . .

Tropical Park Race Track, Jan. 17.

Dear Al:

Old Two-a-Day Bennings came through with his usual quota of winners today. Jim Crawford and Hasty Peter greeted the judges first to keep the day from being a total loss. I was well represented in the money, however, and it took a powerful ride by Henry Cruz, the Washington boy, to keep The Tout ahead of Grayback, my exclusive pick, in the fourth race. I gave the books a thorough going over tonight in an attempt to break my streak. I'm aiming at four or nothing. Of course, if I'm shutout if will mean I will have Clocker Mike to feed, providing I can locate him. He was last heard of at Jefferson Park.

BILL.

First race—Texas Tommy appears to be the speed of the party in the opener and providing a lively apprentice is assigned we should start the day with a winner. Screen carries top weight and is dangerous off that last. Hasty Belle for the show.

Second race—Knights Hope has been fairly consistent hereabouts and appears capable of taking care of this field. Looks as if Balaski will ride. Margaret Foley, highly touted, and Designate to fill out the money circle.

Third race—Fred Almy turned in a sizzling place effort in his last appearance despite the fact that he had poor racing luck. Clear sailing should bring this one home in front. Pat C. is as good as that winning performance. Drombo, my old friend, gets in action and is dangerous in any field.

Fourth race—Indian Salute and Appomattox will draw most of the play in this mile and should do most of the running. I favor them in the order named, although the latter probably will have the best of the riders. Border Patrol has an outside chance to upset the top pair.

Fifth race—Wedding Ring is reported fit and ready for a race of this kind and gets the Bennings call. General A. and Zorana, the last named with only 103 pounds, to take care of the others.

Sixth race—Cabochon should find this distance to his liking. The Brookmeade racer, a failure in Maryland last fall, has found his speed and should pass the front runners in the stretch. Barkantine is in light and is the one to beat. Hawk Moth will be close up at the pay-off station.

Seventh race—Black Target was left flatfooted at the barrier rise last out. I see no reason for a repetition of that performance. If away winging tomorrow, it will be all over but the ticket cashing. Darkling is one that I respect. Sky Haven for the minor award.

V. P. I. Matmen Open Season Saturday

Freshmen and Varsity to Meet North Carolina at Blacksburg.

BLACKSBURG, Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.).—Virginia Tech and Earl Tilson hope to regain at least a slice of mat laurels that have slipped away in recent years. Blacksburg haunts that knew the tramp of champions back in "the twenties" may be the stalking ground of a new winner in college wrestling this winter.

The first test will come Saturday against strong teams of the University of North Carolina in War Memorial Hall here. Rival first-year teams will clash at 3 p. m. and varsity teams at 7. Tech's varsity boxers will follow at 8:30 to put on the finale to the program, meeting a crack array of boxing talent from Catholic University.

Tilson Is Optimistic.

Meanwhile, Earl Tilson, who succeeds George Herring as coach, looks over his varsity matmen and smiles. "They are not champions but real troublemakers for somebody," he says. "And they are looking better every day."

Earl never lost a bout in four years at Washington and Lee. He drank deep of the mat science that Archie Mathis teaches crack teams at the university in Lexington.

For two months the Gobbler grapplers have been training for the five-meet schedule that begins Saturday. Pace-setters on a squad of 30 varsity boys will face the Tarheels. They are: 118, Ernest Minnich, Richmond; 126, Russell Minter, Blacksburg; 135, Joe Gibbs, Lawrenceville; 145, Clint Broyles, West Graham; 155, Rowland Fisher, Middletown; 165, Bob Priode, Clintwood; 175, Capt. Nelson Waldrop, Beaverdam; unlimited, Tris Huffman, Culpeper.

Freshman Line-ups.

Probable freshman line-up: 118, D. R. Chambers; 126, J. T. Evans; 135, R. K. Punches; 145, Pete Barrow; 155, M. P. Gooden; 165, J. F. Bell; 175, W. Robins or Charles Wagley; unlimited, Day Dailey or Flinky Piland.

The varsity boxers, beaten 5½ to 2½ by North Carolina last week, face another crack outfit when they meet Catholic U. Wins were scored at Carolina by Capt. Granville Bussey, junior middleweight, and Red Negri, heavyweight. Bob Fausel fought to a draw in his first varsity match. Tech battlers waged a great battle all the way and should stage another thriller against Catholic University.

Legion Team Victor.

Charles Town, W. Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.).—The Charles Town American Legion cage team swamped the Hagerstown (Md.) Moose five here, 53-28.

Ready to Prove He Is Sane, Rassler Asks Reinstatement

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Jan. 17 (AP).—Everette Marshall, Colorado wrestler, who was suspended from Pennsylvania rings several months ago and ordered to submit to a mental examination before he would be permitted to grapple in this State again, petitioned the athletic commission for reinstatement today.

The commission imposed an indefinite suspension on him after his disqualification in a title bout with Jim Londos, of Greece, which Marshall ended by attacking the referee.

He declared himself today as ready to submit to the examination which the commission ruled would have to be made by three alienists chosen by the solons and paid for by Marshall. The commission said it will consider the reinstatement application.

Questioned by the commission, Marshall denied reports that he had said in Kansas City he intended sing the board for $500,000 for alleged defamation of character. He said his father and uncle had instigated the charge in his behalf, but that he did not know if it had ever been taken to court.

Detroit Is Willing To Aid Marion Club

Marion, Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.).—Detroit and at least five other major league clubs are willing to lend financial assistance in putting the Blue Ridge League on its feet as a class D circuit and reorganizing the old Appalachian League, according to information received by Frank Moffett, manager last summer of the Marion baseball club of the Blue Ridge League.

Detroit, it is said, is willing to put up two-thirds of the running expenses of the club in Marion not to exceed $3,000, if Marion will play in a reorganized class D league.

Bates Five Victor.

The Bates A. C. nosed out the Roamers, 26-24, on the Langley Junior High School floor yesterday. After a slow-scoring first half, in which the Bates five took a 6-3 lead, both teams came through in the final two periods to run up heavey scores.

Jeffries, of Bates, and Pitts, of the Roamers, were the scoring stars of their respective teams, each sinking 4 goals for 8 points.

Massanutten Tankmen Oppose Mercersburg

Woodstock, Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.). Massanutten Military Academy, of Woodstock, will open its 1934 swimming schedule here January 26, opposing Mercersburg (Pa.) Academy.

The Massanutten swimmers, coached by Leslie Fouts, tied the national interscholastic record for the 160-yard free style last week during a meet at Baltimore. John Macionis, a member of the Mercersberg team to be seen here Saturday, is holder of the world's interscholastic record for the 220-yard free style. Other institutions on the card of the Massanutten swimmers include Culver Military Academy, North Carolina State College and Princeton Frosh.

Jameson, of District, Wins Florida Match

Coral Gables, Fla., Jan. 17 (Spl.). Earl C. Jameson, of Washington, D. C., came through successfully in the first round of match play, for the annual winter left-handers golf championship over the Miami-Biltmore Country Club course here today. He eliminated W. E. Wright, of Chicago, 2 and 1.

Everett G. Livesay, of Columbus, Ohio, winner of the qualifying medal, trounced J. Leitzer, of Brooklyn, N. Y., by 8 and 7.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JIM CRAWFORD, $3.30, $2.70, $2.20; EARLE MAXWELL, $6.00, $3.80; MOON SIDE, $4.20.

JIM CRAWFORD beat the gate by several lengths, opened wide lead, saved ground, and was only galloping at end. EARLE MAXWELL broke very fast and was hard ridden all the way. MOON SIDE got away well, but dropped right out of contention in the stretch; he came with a rush and would have been second in another stride. TIME BALL ran real good race for first effort. BLACKBIRDER had no mishap. SAM ALEXANDER was pulled up after the start.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 2:38½. Off at 2:39. Winner, Godfrey Preece's ch. g. (4), by Stimulus—Change. Trained by G. S. Preece. Value to winner, $360; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $15. Time, 1:11 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ENERGETIC BOY, $26.80, $11.40, $7.30; MAKING BUBBLES, $4.30, $3.60; DEFERRED, $5.30.

ENERGETIC BOY, showing good speed, quickly ran into lead, drew out in stretch, winning nicely in hand. MAKING BUBBLES worked his way up and finished fast. DEFERRED came from far back. BATTLING KNIGHT had speed for half a mile and then dropped back. CANON LAW closed a big gap and is about ready to win. SUN TEATIME had speed for three furlongs. BOY CRAZY lacked speed.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:00½. Off at 3:12. Winner, Mrs. S. H. Fairbanks' blk. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HASTY PETER, $7.80, $3.20, $2.80; HAPPY SCOT, $2.80, $2.80; LUCKY JACK, $6.40.

HASTY PETER broke well, was kept close to the pace, came wide entering the stretch, closed gamely and just got up to win. HAPPY SCOT, rushed into a good lead, saved ground well and held on in the last 20 yards. LUCKY JACK, showing more early speed than usual, was right with pace all the way. WAR SAINT, under timid handling, closed a big gap. THE KING quit badly. HEART BREAK was outrun.

FOURTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:43. Off at 3:44½. Winner, T. Lee Evans' ch. g. Stock Leaders Close Lower; Rails Rally

Steel Heads List Cut by Realizing; Sales Drop to 2,930,100 Shares.

New York, Jan. 17 (AP).—Stocks did considerable churning today and volume lightened. Many of the so-called leaders closed moderately lower, although there were numerous advances in rail and specialty sections, the latter providing most of the net gains.

Dollars were higher against sterling but lower most of the day in their relation to European gold currencies.

Generally speaking, the range for the more prominent stocks was again narrow. Alcohols and chemicals were stronger and fairly active. American Commercial, U. S. Industrial and National Distillers improved a point or two.

Degrees of Briskness.

Varying degrees of briskness were noted in the demand for such miscellaneous issues as Celanese, Armour of Illinois preferred, Industrial Rayon, the Baldwin Locomotive Shares, U. S. Steel preferred, Radio, Ingersoll Rand, United Drug, Eaton Manufacturing, American Woolen preferred, Mohawk Mills and several others.

Their net gains amounted to a point or more in several instances.

Realizing was more insistent in U. S. Steel, American Telephone, General Motors, Standard Oil of New Jersey, General Electric, Bethlehem, American Can and Consolidated Gas, but their losses were fractional. Chrysler, Case, Western Union, Union Pacific, Chesapeake & Ohio, Du Pont, Union Carbide and Allied Chemical were up about one-half to 3 points. Sales totaled 2,930,100 shares.

News Favors Recovery.

The balance of business news seemed to be on the side of recovery. Earnings for 1933 are beginning to trickle in and it is apparent that some companies, particularly those which profited most from last summer's boom, did better than in 1932, although returns are too meager thus far to permit much of an estimate.

Iron Age said steel output was recovering more rapidly than had been expected in view of the heavy shipments made during December. The big volume of specifications and orders which the industry expects from its principal supporters, the automobile makers, railroads and construction, has not yet reached the mills, but notwithstanding delays, which in the case of motor car manufacture is incident to difficulties with new model production, eventual placement of this business is anticipated.

The scrap market, usually a good barometer of steel sentiment, continues to advance.

Foreign Markets.

London, Jan. 17 (A.P.).—Prices were irregular in a quieter session on the stock exchange today. Profit taking and bearish selling adversely affected most sections with the exception of Argentine rails and Japanese bonds, which were firmer. Transatlantic issues and gold mining shares hardened in the afternoon. The market closed irregular.

Paris—Following the lead of the London market, trading on the bourse was hesitant. Profit taking caused small losses, but prices strengthened toward the close, which was irregular.

Berlin—Business on the boerse was dull, and with the exception of the bond section, price fluctuations were slight. The market closed unsettled.

Robey's Review

New Gold Bill Confers Upon Secretary of Treasury Greater Power Over Nation's Money and Credit Than Now Held by Reserve System.

By Ralph West Robey.

Some days ago a question was asked at the White House as to whether the Government was planning the establishment of a central bank. The President replied that the report was not even a good guess. It now is apparent that, except in some technical and mechanical respects, the report was much better than a good guess. The new gold bill confers upon the Secretary of the Treasury far greater power over our monetary and credit system than the Federal Reserve System has ever possessed.

Whether this is to be regarded as the establishment of a central bank, granting the powers are used, depends entirely upon one's conception of what constitutes such an institution. If one accepts the usual meaning of the term—an institution that exercises supervision over the monetary and credit system of a country—he must conclude that by this current action the Government functionally is repiacing the Federal Reserve System with the Secretary of the Treasury.

It seems to me that this is the only reasonable interpretation to place upon the action. This does not mean, it should be emphasized, that the Federal Reserve System will go out of existence. Rather it means that the System is being given a new directing head—a political superhead—in the person of the Secretary of the Treasury. Henceforth the Reserve banks will provide a mechanical organization for carrying out the orders of the Treasury.

Interpretations Placed Upon Proposed Legislation.

Those who disagree with this interpretation will reply that there is no reason why this should be the result—what the current legislation does is to replace the gold now held by the Reserve banks with gold certificates, and consequently that there is no grounds for assuming that the Reserve System officers will not go ahead as always. Such a reply overlooks the degree of power being concentrated in the hands of the Secretary of the Treasury. Never before in our history, I think, has one man had such power conferred upon him. By comparison, the power of the Federal Reserve is almost puny.

In the first place the Secretary is being given $2,000,000,000 to use in carrying out such policies as he decides upon. The present capital and surplus of the Federal Reserve System is less than $500,000,000. It is true, of course, that in addition to this the reserve banks have other large sums, as a result of deposits, but there is nothing in the act to prevent the Secretary of the Treasury from also accumulating deposits.

Secondly, the Secretary of the Treasury is given power "to purchase, sell, discount or negotiate, or to contract to purchase, sell, discount or negotiate," an all-inclusive list of credit instruments. Specifically this list includes drafts, checks, bills of exchange, acceptances, including bankers' acceptances, coin, bullion, cable transfers, foreign exchange, bonds, notes, evidences of indebtedness, including the obligations of the United States or any foreign government, and any obligations or securities in whatever currency."

Further Transactions That Are Possible Under Power.

Further, transactions in such gold, foreign exchange and credit instruments may take place either "at home or abroad." Still further, such paper may be purchased, sold, discounted or negotiated, either "with or without indorsement or guarantee." This means that the Secretary of the Treasury, insofar as the law is concerned, may buy the promissory notes of a bankrupt farmer or any one else quite regardless of his credit standing or the chances that the note ever will be paid.

Finally, the Secretary is authorized to set up credits in payment of such transactions and "to exercise such powers as are incidental to the powers conferred by this section." This means that deposits may be written up on books. This, in turn, means of necessity that checks can be drawn. If we get to this point obviously we shall have a bank even in mechanical details.

The only limitation placed by the act upon the exercise of these powers by the Secretary of the Treasury is that they are "for the purpose of stabilizing the exchange value of the dollar." Ordinarily such a restriction would be a protection. It would mean that the fund could be used only to hold the dollar steady in terms of foreign currencies, for this is the accepted meaning of the phrase "exchange value of the dollar." With this Administration, however, the limitation affords no protection. Judging by the past record, "exchange value of the dollar" may well prove to mean in their mind an exchange value for commodities at the 1926 price level.

Bonds Retain Firmness in Lighter Sales

Market Is Still Optimistic; Trading Volume Drops to $21,874,000.

New York, Jan. 17 (AP).—The bond market, as a whole, was fairly firm today, but the activity dwindled as the financial district turned to a more serious study of the Administration's new monetary program and its possible effects on listed loans generally.

Sales totaled $21,874,000, par value, against $25,404,000 yesterday.

The average for 60 domestic corporate issues moved up three-tenths of a point, to 79.1. The 1933 high for this average was 83.5.

Market Still Optimistic.

Market sentiment was still optimistic, although banking circles were inclined to watch closely for signs of an Anglo-American currency war, which, they admit, is entirely possible with the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund which Washington will have at its disposal.

At the same time, however, usually well-informed quarters believe that some agreement on dollar-pound rates will be worked out soon between Great Britain and the United States.

Only about $3,000,800 of United States Government securities were transferred during the day, but the majority of the Libertys and Treasurys finished with gains of 1-32 to 6-32 of a point.

Rails Hold Popularity.

Rail liens continued to hold their popularity, although there were a few spots in this section which were attributed to profit taking.

The more active carrier gainers of fractions to 2 or more points included some liens of Santa Fe, Baltimore & Ohio, Chesapeake Corporation, St. Paul, Chicago & Northwestern, Erie, Hudson & Manhattan, Missouri Pacific, New York Central, Nickel Plate, Southern Pacific and Union Pacific.

Among the utilities and industrials up 1 to more than 2 were bonds of Warner Bros., Studebaker, Philadelphia Co., North American Edison, North American Co., National Dairy, Morris & Co., McKesson, International Telephone, Federal Light, Cincinnati Gas, Columbia Gas, Chile Copper, American Waterworks and American I. G. Chemical.

On Gaining List.

Gulf States Steel 5½'s and Houston Oil 5½'s advanced 3 each, and most loans of American Telephone and Consolidated Gas were moderately higher. American Telephone convertible 4½'s, however, dropped 2½ points.

Australian obligations were the heaviest traded of the foreign department, but these closed unchanged to slightly lower. The Colombians gained 2 to aroumd 4 points and some of the French and Japanese municipals were up a point or more.

The Germans were mixed and British bonds were off 1 to more than 2.

Cotton Reacts Slightly Under Liquidation

January Closes at 11.13 as General Markets Drop 7 to 12 Points.

New York, Jan. 17 (AP).—Cotton prices moved irregularly today closing barely steady at net declines of 7 to 12 points.

May contracts after selling off to 11.30 early or 14 points net lower and 35 points below the high level of last Monday, rallied to 11.53 but lost nearly all the improvement, and closed at 11.32.

Initial prices were off 6 to 10 points in response to relatively easy Liverpool cables and further liquidation. The decline soon extended to 11.12 for March and 11.44 for July, making net losses of about 14 to 18 points.

Trade Good Buyer.

The trade was a good buyer on the scale down, while offerings tapered off somewhat after the initial pressure subsided. As the tone steadied, there was a renewal of commission-house demand as well as scattered covering on the improved technical condition of the market and prices stiffened up during the middle of the day.

The market met increased offerings at the advance to 11.38 for March and 11.69 for May or 8 to 10 points net-higher. Part of the selling seemed to come through houses recently credited with operating for one or another of the Government agencies, and there was a renewal of scattering liquidation by some of the early buyers. Closing quotations were within 2 to 6 points of the lowest for the day.

There were reports of a good spot demand, particularly from European sources. Exports today 25,183 making 4,630,959 so far this season. Port receipts 19,384. U. S. port stocks 3,907,894.

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil was easy today, closing 10 to 12 points net lower under liquidation in May and some Western selling in July promoted by the late reaction in cotton, and the easier crude oil. Sales, 17 contracts. Bleachable spot, nominal; January closed, 4.63, March, 4.82; May, 4.96; July, 5.17.

Cottonseed Crush Is Less In Half Year

(Associated Press.)

Cottonseed crushed during the five-month period, August 1 to December 31, was reported this week by the Census Bureau to have totaled 2,425,506 tons, compared with 2,586,677 tons in the same period a year ago.

Power Production Gain Is Continued

New York, Jan. 17 (AP).—The increasing rate of gain in electric power output over last year which started around the middle of December continued last week, with production 10.1 per cent higher against a 9.7 per cent rise in the previous week. This is the most favorable comparison reported since last September. The outturn also ran well ahead of the first week in January, which included the New Year holiday.

Production for the week as reported by the Edison Electric Institute was 1,646,271,000 kilowatt hours compared with 1,563,678,000 in the previous week and 1,495,116,000 in the same period last year.

Among the major geographic divisions, the sharpest improvement occurred in Southern States which had a gain of 10.4 per cent over last year compared with a 1.3 per cent gain in the previous week. New England was up 9.2 per cent against 8.7; Middle Atlantic, up 8.6 against 11.3; Central Industrial, up 13.1 against 13; West Central, up 8.8 against 9.3; Rocky Mountain, up 19.8 against 19.1; Pacific Coast, up 3.5 against 3.4.

Daily Oil Yield Increased by 145,300 Units

Week's Output Averages 2,311,250 Barrels; Imports Gain.

New York, Jan. 17 (AP).—Daily average gross crude oil production in the United States increased 145,300 barrels in the week ended January 13, totaling 2,311,250 barrels, the American Petroleum Institute's weekly summary indicates.

Daily average production east of California increased 133,900 barrels to 1,838,250 barrels.

Refineries representing 82.4 per cent of the estimated total capacity, operated at 63.3 per cent of their capacity, reported daily average runs of crude oil to stills as 2,116,000 barrels.

Daily average the previous week for refineries representing 92.4 per cent of total, operated at 59.0 per cent capacity, was 1,973,000 barrels.

Motor Fuel Stocks.

Motor fuel stocks totaled 51,033,000 barrels, against 50,606,000 barrels.

Daily average cracked gasoline by refineries representing 95.1 per cent of total charging capacity was 413,000 barrels.

Daily average the previous week by refineries representing 95.1 per cent of total was 416,000 barrels.

Depression Cut In Bell Phones Is Trimmed

New York, Jan. 16.—During the first eight months of 1933 there was a net loss of 715,000 Bell System telephones but during each of the last four months there was a gain, totaling 85,000, leaving a net loss of 630,000 for the year as compared with a net loss of 1,650,000 during 1932. The number of telephones in service at the end of the year was about 13,160,000, which is 16 per cent below the maximum development reached in 1930.

The total number of toll and long distance calls handled during the year 1933 was about 9 per cent less than for 1932. The last half of 1933, however, showed and improvement, total toll and long distance calls being only about 3 per cent under those for the corresponding period in 1932.

While final figures as to earnings for the year 1933 are not yet available, preliminary data indicate that, treating the system as a whole and including the Western Electric Co., the earnings on American Telephone & Telegraph Co. stock were approximately $5.30 per share as compared with $5.96 per share in 1932.

The annual report, to be issued later to the stockholders, will contain full and final data on the results of the year's operations.

British Production Of Books Boosted

With the exception of 1930 British output of books in 1933 was the highest on record, according to a report from the American consulate general, London, made public by the Commerce Department. The total number of books published in that period was 15,022, an increase of 188 over the preceding year.

Publication of novels during 1933 reached the record figure of 1,950 volumes. The year's output of fiction, however, registered a decrease, which was brought about by a decrease in new editions and reprints.

The general figures for 1933 and 1932 vary so slightly, according to the report, that no change in national taste in reading is discernible. The largest increases took place in sociology, religion, law, biography and philology.

Viewing the year's output generally, new books totaled 11,082, an increase of 568 over 1932. New editions declined by 380 to 3,949. In each month, with the exception of December, approximately 1,000 books were published.

Lumber Orders Rise.

(Associated Press.)

Lumber orders booked in the first week of January were reported by the National Lumber Manufacturers Association today as greater than any of the previous four weeks. Orders reported by 1,160 mills totaled 107,239,000 feet; production, 110,679,000 feet, and shipments, 98,042,000 feet.

Peery Begins Term, Appoints 10 State Aids

15 Jobs Held Back, Seen as Governor's Club Over Assembly.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Richmond, Jan. 17 (Spl.).—Reappointment of ten State officials by Gov. Peery shortly after his inauguration today led to speculation over whether other political plums would be held as a club over the General Assembly.

Some 15 key positions remain to be filled, exclusive of 6 other lucrative jobs to be created should the Legislature pass pending liquor and horse racing bills.

Delegate Wilbur C. Hall, Leesburg, and C. O'Connor Goolrick, Fredericksburg, former State senator, are among those prominently mentioned as possible members of the proposed three-man liquor control commission.

Officials reappointed included C. H. Morrissette, tax commissioner; T. McCall Frazier, motor vehicle commissioner; Charles A. Osborne, director, division of purchase and printing; John M. Purcell, treasurer; Dr. Sidney B. Hall, superintendent of public instruction; Arthur W. James, director of public welfare; William R. Shands, director of reference and legislative drafting; Peter Saunders, secretary of the Commonwealth; S. Gardner Waller, adjutant general, and J. H. Bradford, director of the budget.

"You'll Fill Chair," Pollard Tells Peery

Richmond, Jan. 17 (AP).—Retiring Gov. Pollard escorted Gov. George Campbell Peery today to his new office. Gov. Peery was motioned to his chair.

"Four years ago Gov. Byrd showed me to this chair," said Gov. Pollard. "I told him I knew I couldn't fill it, but I'd rattle around in it."

Glancing over the more than 6 feet of his successor, the retiring governor added:

"You will more than fill it."

Seated in the chair Gov. Peery examined the desk to see that his knees would fit under it, rubbed his finger over some penknife scratching on the well-worn desk and wondered "who did that;" noted a bank of flowers in the office, and announced his appointments. Then he went to lunch in the mansion. Tonight he was host at a public reception.

Radio Waves and Ripples

COLUMBIA has leased the old Hudson Theater in New York for use as a broadcasting studio.

Of course, it's a move to get even with N. B. C. for fitting out Radio City with colossal stages and huge seating capacities, though Mr. Paley, Columbia's president, did say it was only because he recognized that some of our very best radio entertainment was coming from the stage anyway and that everyone was getting simply frantic to see broadcasts.

The theater will be named Columbia Broadcasting System's Radio Playhouse, which does sound kind of cute. Of course, a lot will have to be done with the old place—they say it simply reeks with tradition and one does feel a little sad to see a fine old theater going modern almost overnight — like fixing the stage up with a lot of microphones and seeing that the acoustics are everything they should be. And Mr. Paley said they would inclose the control room — that's "studio monitoring booth" over at N. B. C. now, you know, because of Maude Adams—in glass so the audience could see the engineers as well as the broadcasters.

They say Ethel Barrymore opened the Hudson in 1903—imagine!—with "Cousin Kate."

Mr. Paley said the Hudson was sold to the Emigrant Industrial Savings Bank, its present owner, in 1932. Now, is that a euphemism or is it a euphemism? When the bank took over Aunt Emma's farm up near Petoskey, Mich., in 1927 we called it foreclosure.

Charlie Luke and Announcer Jim McGrath were putting their regular Wednesday morning program on the air from WRC when Mr. Scott, the porter, came into the studio with dustpan and broom.

Mr. Scott started to sweep.

Mr. Luke and Announcer McGrath thought it was Mr. Scott's way of joking, went on broadcasting.

Mr. Scott thought Mr. Luke's and Announcer Mike's way of joking was to pretend they were broadcasting.

Mr. Scott kicked over an xylophone, picked it up, kicked it over again, went on cleaning.

If you ever saw the Fitz Sisters in the good old days when the Keith-Orpheum vaudeville circuit was flourishing, you probably saw Mary Knox. She was the girl who played the piano.

Mary comes to WRC at 11 o'clock tomorrow night at the start of a regular Friday show series. She still plays the piano.

Artur Rodzinski, newly appointed conductor of the Cleveland Symphony Orchestra, has been asked to bring his organization before Columbia microphones for a concert Saturday afternoon, January 27, at 2:30 o'clock.

Rodzinski has accepted, of course, and will open his program with Sir Hamilton Harty's as yet unpublished arrangement of the Handel Organ Concerto.

This is Rodzinski's first season in Cleveland. He is a native of Dalmatia and was brought to America in 1925 by Leopold Stokowski, whom he assisted with the Philadelphia Orchestra for three years. For the last four seasons he has had charge of the Los Angeles Philharmonic.

Selections from the musical works of William H. Woodin, erstwhile Secretary of the Treasury, will be played by Enoch Light and his orchestra during the Saturday afternoon broadcasts on Columbia, starting next Saturday.

Mr. Woodin's low pun resistance is probably evidenced by the title to one of the songs Mary Danis will sing with the Light band this week—"Little Wooden Willie."

Columbia has signed Jack Denny's Orchestra to work with Jack Whiting on the new Marvelous Melodies series starting next month. Denny is to have charge of the musical settings for the new productions, which are to be built along the lines of intimate Broadway musical shows.

That sharp-shooting versifier, Dorothy Parker, is down on the Columbia books for a microphone appearance with Alexander Woollcott, who is something of a sharp shooter with words himself when he isn't testing the back-seat riding qualities of certain automobiles. They will unite in a "Town Crier" broadcast Friday, January 26.

Columbia brings Prince Tokugawa, former president of the Japanese House of Peers, to a microphone tomorrow at 3 p. m., for his first air address since his arrival in the United States. Frederic Moore, a member of the Japanese delegation at Geneva, will introduce him.

California Melodies on C. B.S. tonight will bring Grace Moore to a microphone as guest artist * * * Capt. Henry's Show Boat puts Carmen on an N. B. C. network in tabloid form tonight * * * The Chicago Board of Trade has arranged a series of talks on grain to start on N. B. C. today at 2:45 p. m., with a discussion of crop prospects by B. W. Snow, dean of the private crop reporters * * * N. B. C. opens a broadcast series this afternoon at 2:45 in which stage people will be given a chance to tell their audiences what they think of them.

EDITH MURRAY

toured the world with the musical comedy "Good News" before Columbia found her and put her on the air twice a week. She'll be heard tonight at 5:15 o'clock.

Liquor Hearing To Start Today

Work Probably Will Take Till March 1, Says Committee Head.

(By Staff Correspondent.)

Richmond, Jan. 17.—"Standing Room Only" signs are expected to be displayed tomorrow when joint liquor hearings are opened by the Senate and House Finance Committes of the General Assembly.

Predictions that final passage of whisky control legislation might be expected by February 1 were discounted tonight by Chairman W. A. Garrett, Senate Finance Committee, Ridgeway.

"We have a big job," he declared. "It may be closer to March 1 than Feburary 1 before we finish."

Both Senator Garrett and Chairman Wilbur C. Hall, House Finance Committee, Leesburg, promised all witnesses appearing would be heard. They said many legislators have indicated a desire to explain their attitude.

Pollard Today to Start Veterans' Board Work

Former Gov. John Garland Pollard of Virginia will assume his new duties as chairman of the Board of Veterans' Appeals, at the Veterans' Administration today.

He probably will take the oath of office at 10:30 o'clock, and is expected to start work immediately.

Colorful Rites Fixed to Honor Lee, Jackson

Veterans to Take Part in Two Programs Tomorrow.

Two special observances tomorrow will mark the birthday anniversaries of Gen. Robert E. Lee and Gen. Stonewall Jackson.

Senator Robert Reynolds, of North Carolina, will be guest speaker at the annual Robert E. Lee celebration at 3:30 in Statuary Hall in the Capitol, held under auspices of the District Division of the Daughters of the Confederacy and the Children of the Confederacy.

In the evening, at 9:15 in the Willard Hotel, the Society of Virginia will pay tribute to its two great leaders in the War Between the States.

Cheatelaine to Speak.

Southern melodies will be presented by Mrs. Fred P. Myers, accompanied by Miss Evelyn Wells. An illustrated lecture on the genius of Lee's tactics in the battles in Virginia will be delivered by V. E. Cheatelaine, chief historian on the National parks, buildings and reservations, commemorating the war.

Confederate veterans then will march in a body to their specially decorated box. Mrs. William Garnett Lee will present a flag to the society, and the following guests of honor will be introduced: Secretary of the Navy Swanson, Stephen A. Early, secretary to President Roosevelt; Assistant Secretary of State R. Walton Moore, District Attorney Leslie C. Garnett, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, Maj. Thomas Jonathan Jackson Christian, grandson of Stonewall Jackson, and the Senators and Representatives fromVirginia.

New Member Added.

At a recent meeting of the executive council the following were elected to membership:

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, Judge Walter T. McCarthy, the Rev. John G. Sadler, Alexander Berkeley Moore, Dr. Custis Lee Hall, Norman B. Hamilton, Miss Ora B. Smith, Denzil E. Wisecarver, George W. W. Virginia Seeks Wider CWA Scope

Must Increase Jobs by Twice, Beehler Says.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Jan. 17 (Spl.). A supplemental program to provide relief employment for at least as many more as are now on CWA pay rolls in the State is being planned.

William N. Beehler, State CWA administrator, declared nearly half of the 140,000 registered at the national employment service must yet be provided with jobs before the situation is fully met in West Virginia. To do this, he said, more jobs must be provided.

Plans are being made for a conference soon at Charleston, with representatives from mining, farming, fruit and other regions to discuss additional employment, Beehler added.

Wife Slain, Husband Held.

Levina Green, colored, 39, was shot and killed yesterday at her home, 2616 I street northwest. Police arrested her husband, John Green, 44.

PUBLIC NOTICE

COMMISSIONERS OF THE DISTRICT OF Columbia, January 16, 1934. Notice is hereby given that under authority granted in Public Act No. 307, approved December 15, 1932, the Commissioners of the District of Columbia propose to conduct a hearing on the advisability of closing Maine Avenue between 3d and 4½ streets N. W., and Missouri avenue between 3d and 4½ streets N.W. All interested property owners are hereby notified that pursuant to the provisions of said act the Commissioners of the District of Columbia will give a public hearing in the board room on the fifth floor of the District Building on MONDAY, February 5, 1934, at 10 o'clock a. m., to determine the question as to any property rights which may be affected, or as to the equity, justice or advisability of said closings. Map showing said closings will be exhibited at said hearing and the Commissioners will consider any suggestions or protests concerning the same which may be offered by any party interested. MELVIN C. HAZEN, GEORGE E. ALLEN, JOHN C. GOTWALS, Commissioners of the District of Columbia.

THOS. J. OWEN & SON, Auctioneers
1431 Eye Street Northwest.

Trustees' Sale of Valuable Modern Residence Known as Premises 2922 45th Street Northwest, Wesley Heights.

The exterior makes a picture of quaint charm with its two chimney of brick and stone. Attractive grouping of rooms in this compact plan make a very livable home. Many windows make all the rooms bright and cheerful; grouped to leave ample wall space for furniture. The living room is given character by its interesting fireplace and the recessed bookshelves balancing the arch to hall.

A wide opening opposite the fireplace gives a vista into the adjoining dining room.

The kitchen with three exposures is conveniently arranged for work.

The second floor has four good bedrooms arranged with a bath between each group of two rooms. The largest bedroom is over the living room with a south-east exposure. Finished room in the attic.

Two-car detached stucco garage.

By virtue of a certain deed of trust duly recorded, in Liber 6720, folio 319 et seq., of the land records of the District of Columbia, and at the request of the party secured thereby, the undersigned trustees will sell, at public auction in front of the premises, on TUESDAY, the TWENTY-THIRD DAY OF JANUARY, A. D. 1934, at THREE-THIRTY O'CLOCK P. M., the following-described land and premises, situate in the District of Columbia, and designated as and being lot 41 in square 1338 in Miller et al's subdivision of lots in block 9 "Wesley Heights," as per plat recorded in Liber 87 at folio 64; subject to a perpetual right of way for all general purposes of ingress and egress for privately driven autos only over the south 4 feet by the full depth of said lot 41.

TERMS: Sold subject to a prior deed of trust for $11,500.00, further particulars of which will be announced at time of sale; the purchase price above said trust to be paid in cash. A deposit of $1,000.00 required. Conveyancing, recording and revenue stamps at purchaser's cost. Terms to be complied with within 15 days, otherwise deposit forfeited and the property may be advertised and resold at the discretion of the trustees.

I JUST BEEN THINKIN' — WHAT IF YOU GOT MARRIED — HOW COULD WE GO 'SPLORIN' THEN — WELL, GEE! WHY WOULD I GET MARRIED.
WELL, I DUNNO — 'CEPT YOU'RE GONNA BE A DOCTOR AN' ALL TH' DOCTORS I KNOW ARE MARRIED! — 'CEPT 'N DOC RIVERS — AN' POP SAYS HE HASN'T GOTTA CHANCE 'COUNTTA GLADYS MULKINS'S MADE UP HER MIND —
WELL, I WOULDN'T! BUT EVEN IF I DID — WE COULD STILL GO 'SPLORIN' — YOU WOULDN'T BE LET! LOOK AT UNCLE BEN! LOOK AT POP! ARE THEY LET!
MEBBE THEY DON'T WANNA —
A LOT OF GOOD IT WOULD DO 'EM IF THEY DID! HUH!

SAY THE WORD - WE'LL HAVE THE CAPTAIN MARRY US. I MEAN---NO---I'M NOT SEEING THE CAPTAIN---- BUT TELL ME YOU'LL MARRY ME WHEN WE GET TO THE STATES.
BERTIE - YOU'RE RIDICULOUS--- I TOLD YOU A THOUSAND TIMES I WONT. THIS IS ALL TOO SILLY. PLEASE GO.

To the Rescue

Walt Mason Himself

Hermitage.

Long wearied by the city's noise, its glare and heat and tawdry joys, my one ambition was to dwell a hermit in a lonely dell, commune with birds and Belgian hares and shed my worldly sordid cares. I was so tired of seeing feet forever toiling up the street, so tired of faces sad and pale, or voices mourning vanished kale, of stricken men who wept and said all pathways to the poorhouse led. So after seeking much I found a pleasant hollow in the ground, hard by a little river's shore, remote from cities and their roar. And there I took my hoarded jack, and built myself a humble shack and settled down to that repose which no one but the hermit knows. And there for fourteen days or so I loafed around and seemed to know the boon of peace of which you've heard—a boon that soon becomes absurd. "Where are my friends?" I asked the breeze that idly slithered through the trees: "Oh, where are Robinson and Smith? There's no one here to argue with. There's no one now to lend an ear when I would make my platform clear; none comes from friendly, nearby shacks, to cuss with me the income tax. The long nights so much silence keep, I lie awake and can not sleep. No autos backfire as they pass, no bricks are thrown to break the glass; stagnation fills this dewy glen, and I'll chase back to town again."
